...SBANE ...F THING ...less, and the ... on the front ...han Lindbergh Mr. Ford's newest ... "the 10-month year," every workman to have two full months to rest, in summer, which is the worst season for factory work.

TO CARRY OUT that program, all 10-month workers must learn how to save. But squirrels do it, hoarding nuts, red Indians did it, drying pemmican. American labor would learn to do it.

At first the factory might withhold one-sixth of the wages, distributing the amount, plus interest, in weekly instalments, during the two months' holiday. Or possibly, NOT probably, employers might add one-sixth to the usual wages, for vacation distribution.

THERE IS, involved in the plan, this question, "How would two months' leisure affect the minds of workers?"

The cloak and suit industry, one of the biggest in the nation, has long compelled workers to take off several months, without pay, each year, sometimes almost half the year.

The men and women are driven hard, during the working season, then compelled to idle.

The result, according to some employers, is Communism, Anarchism, class hatred, and similar by-products of idleness.

IT WOULD be wise, somehow, to supply weekly incomes, during the two months vacation. Then, with Tom Thumb golf, motoring, swimming, radio, etc., there would be little dangerous thinking.

The average mortal thinks only when compelled to, rarely when he has an assured income. Study the sons of rich men if you doubt it.

YESTERDAY'S newspapers reported a most shocking airplane disaster.

In threatening weather, a pilot in Chicago took two girls up, for a "joy ride."

They were last seen, with lightning flashing about their plane, headed for an enormous gas tank, in the thick of the city, the pilot struggling to escape by parachute. The plane plunged through the tank roof, made of steel, carrying the doomed passengers down through the gas chamber, into a 40-foot well, filled with water, at the bottom of the tank.

Flying, and especially carrying passengers under any but safe conditions, should be strictly regulated by law, with severe punishment for recklessness.

That pilot stupidly and recklessly killed two young women, easily persuaded that there was no danger in the threatening storm. Flying under such conditions should be punished with imprisonment, regardless of the outcome.

DR. THOMAS, president of Rutgers University, advises 200,000 young men and women about to enter American colleges to "leave their conceit at home." The doctor's advice is sound, if properly understood, but it is not to be taken literally. What we call "conceit" is half-developed ambition.

TO TELL a young man to leave at home the driving power of conceit would be like telling a watch to leave its mainspring at home. You need conceit, which means belief in yourself, to keep you going.

"Conceit is not the way to popularity, least of all on a college campus," says the doctor.

On the other hand, popularity on a college campus is of no great importance, later in life.

WHEN YOUNG BONAPARTE sulked in corners, at French military school, despising comrades that laughed at his Corsican accent, he was not popular, but later, as emperor, he made some of them marshals, and had others shot.

"COURAGE LOST, everything lost, better thou wert never born," says Goethe, who had plenty of conceit always, and stands third among the great writers of the world.

Conceit is a form of mental courage. The wise young man or woman does not parade it, but clings to it, until cold reality and failure wipe it out.

NEW YORK CITY enjoys another of the prize fights that pay profits to politicians.

A small Cuban Negro, "Kid" Chocolate, weighing 10 pounds less than his white British opponent, "Kid" Berg, was declared loser.

Thirty-five thousand intellectual Americans paid $150,000 to see the battle and started separate fights of their own, arguing about the decision. Those that bet on the Negro, hitherto undefeated, thought they had been cheated, which was probable. There will be another fight between the two "Kids," more betting, more arguing, and perhaps cheating. And undoubtedly 35,000 more intelligent Americans will pay $150,000 again.

HEAT WAVE BROKEN, RAIN HOLDS OFF

FLIER BOMBS KENTUCKY MINES

Aftermath of Labor Trouble, Nine Explosions Occur, but Injure None, Cause No Loss

PROVIDENCE, Ky., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—An airplane today dropped bombs into this coal mining section, torn by labor troubles for several months.

The bombs, estimated at nine in number, created intense excitement, but injured no one and did no property damage.

The machine, containing two men and described as an orange-colored monoplane, appeared about 2,000 feet, coming from the direction of Illinois. The first bomb struck near Clay City, a few miles north of here. Then the machine dived towards Providence and released two bombs. Columns of stone and dust rose from a field.

BLASTS HEARD FOR MILES

The plane circled the town and came back, dropping lower as it came on. A bomb fell at the entrance to the Ruckman mine, but failed to explode. Five more were dropped near the Meador, Young and Holt mine, but only two exploded. The detonations of the bombs could be heard for miles and threw the town into an uproar. The machine appeared about the time the miners were going to work.

The license number of the bombing plane was reported as 5088. Government records showed a license, C-5088, issued to an airport near Chicago, but this was given a biplane. The machine which dropped the bombs was described as a monoplane.

Walter Thomas, 24, of 629 Chess street, who disappeared after rescuing his girl companion from a burning automobile which had gone over an embankment in Nobles lane, surrendered to Carrick police this afternoon.

Thomas told police he was driving a rented car when the front wheel came off, causing the machine to drop over the embankment. The car burst into flames, he said.

Thomas said he dragged the unconscious girl up the hillside where he placed her into an automobile which he stopped. She was taken to the South Side Hospital.

He said he then got into another machine and went to receive medical aid.

PINCHOT FILES INDEPENDENT TICKET

Former Governor Moves to Safeguard Interests at Election in November

HARRISBURG, Aug. 11.—Papers were filed here today pre-empting the name of the Fair Play party in the interest of former Gov. Gifford Pinchot.

He will go before the people of the state this fall as the candidate for governor in the event the Supreme Court decides adversely in the Luzerne County ballot case, which was brought by Francis Shunk Brown, his chief Republican opponent.

PRECAUTIONARY MOVE

P. S. Stahlnecker, secretary to the former governor, filed the papers. Pinchot is taking the step, Stahlnecker said, as a precautionary measure. If the Supreme Court determines that the former governor is the Republican nominee, nothing will be done about the Fair Play Party nomination which was filed for statewide office.

The pre-emptors were: Harry T. Farrell, Nanticoke, a member of the State Boxing Commission; Stephen J. Bilko, Nanticoke, and David J. Williams Plymouth, both connected with the United Mine Workers of America; Harry Trebilcox and Charles L. Gavenonis, both of Plymouth.

In choosing the name "Fair Play," Pinchot selected the phrase that keynoted his primary campaign and upon which he will build his campaign for election in November.

AIDES HERE PREPARED

Former Judge Frank I. Gollmar, county manager of the Pinchot campaign in Allegheny County, announced today that Pinchot followers here were prepared to campaign for the former governor under the Fair Play party, if necessary.

LOW WATER HERE HOLDS NO PERIL

Officials Declare Tests Show Disease Menace Absent; Pray for Showers

The cool weather was to continue today, a great relief from the torrid weather of last week.

Weather Forecaster W. S. Brotzman was unable to predict any rain to end the six weeks' drought that is causing thousands of dollars' damage in the county.

Yesterday's temperatures contrasted sharply with the heat of the preceding days. Last midnight the temperature had dropped to 64 degrees. Brotzman said the cool weather would last for at least another 24 hours.

TYPHOID NOT FEARED

Dr. John R. Conover, county medical director, and Dr. P. T. Marks, assistant city health director, agreed today that there was no danger of a typhoid epidemic because of the water shortage. Dr. Marks pointed out that Pittsburgh's typhoid rate for the summer has been extremely low.

In Bentleyville, Washington County, Police Chief Frank Wertz reported that analysis had proved a public spring and a private well were carrying typhoid germs. The spring has not been closed, but the residents have been warned to boil its water for 20 minutes.

PRAYERS FOR RAIN

In many churches in this district, congregations offered prayers for rain. At both the morning and evening service clergymen led members of their congregation in prayers for showers to end the droughtt.

The city bureau of recreation announced that 11 additional street showers would be put in operation this week.

Brush fires were numerous yesterday, keeping the city departments on the jump and also bringing out volunteer departments of the county districts. City firemen battled for six hours yesterday and last night to extinguish a brush fire on the hillside overlooking the Monongа-

Individual Health Care Advocated by Coolidge

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Aug. 11.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Good health is one of our chief national assets. Yet, in spite of all the progress that has been made in the science of hygiene, the yearly losses in this country from the ravages of disease run into many hundreds of millions of dollars.

The discouraging feature of the situation is that much of this is needless. With the present knowledge of medicine, surgery and dentistry, and the possibilities of preventive measures, oftentimes illness is only personal carelessness.

Calvin Coolidge.

People give altogether too little attention to their health. They neglect to get sufficient fresh air and exercise. They are not careful enough of their diet. They overstrain their physical and nervous systems with disastrous results.

Because illness makes us a liability to ourselves, our family and our community, we all have a personal obligation to keep well. To neglect the health is one of the most wasteful things a person can do. It is a violation of a moral duty. While both state and national agencies are alert to preserve health, the real success of all their efforts lies in the vigilance of the individual. If we should all think and try to live healthful lives we would greatly increase the power of the nation.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

NO RABBIT, DOGS IDLE TONIGHT

The Guyasuta dog track still is without a rabbit, and accordingly will not open tonight.

However, the electrical engineer, who, according to John Douglas, removed the rabbit from the track in retaliation for the Kennel Club's inability to reimburse him for it, has promised to return it tomorrow.

The other mechanical rabbit which the hounds chase is in a machine shop for repairs. It also will be ready for service tomorrow night. The assumption follows that dog racing will be resumed tomorrow night.

Douglas announced the absence of the rabbits as the cause for the closing of the track Saturday.

Wirth Says Germany Is "Freeest Country"

BERLIN, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Joseph Wirth, minister of the interior, in an address in the Reichstag marking the eleventh annual celebration of Constitution Day, declared Germany had "been made safe for democracy," although the consequences of the Versailles treaty in many respects remained a thorn in the country's flesh.

Germany, under republican rule, he asserted, may boast of being "the freest country in the world." President von Hindenburg was an interested listener.

German Distance Flier Crash Victim

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—(INS.)—A man believed to be Baron Koenig von Warthausen, famous 24-year-old German flier who was awarded the Hindenburg trophy for a long-distance flights from Berlin to Siberia, was seriously injured here today in an automobile accident, in which three others were hurt. The car in which they were riding collided with a milk truck.

R-100 CROSSES U. S. BORDER

TORONTO, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—The British dirigible R-100 flew over Canadian cities today and dipped twice into the United States, crossing the international border at Niagara Falls.

The airship, which flew from England the week before last, had swung at its Montreal mooring mast since its arrival while riggers repaired a stabilizing fin torn by storm shortly before it reached its Canadian destination.

This morning the vessel passed over the government building at Ottawa, made three visits to Toronto, and swung around the western tip of Lake Ontario to Niagara Falls. Thousands saw the largest of all dirigibles as she flew at low altitude throught a clear sky.

Today's flight served as a test of last week's repairs, and with favorable weather the airship will start back across the Atlantic some time this week.

North Side's Last Harness Maker Shuts Up Shop

Another "last man" gave in to the advance of progress today when James McClune, of 102 East Park way, the sole remaining harness maker on the North Side, packed his tools and moved to Dixmont.

McClune, a 60-year-old Irishman, learned his trade in Belfast. He came to Pittsburgh as a boy. Three years ago, he took up his last stand on the North Side, after trade in Allentown had collapsed.

VOTE MACHINES PROMISED SOON

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong promised today, after a conference with State Senator Frank J. Harris, father of the voting machine legislation, that something would be done this week to supply Allegheny County with the devices. There is said to be no chance, however, that Pittsburgh will have machines at the November election, since other cities preceding it in alphabetical order—Clairton, Duquesne and McKeesport—must first be equipped.

Two bids have been submitted for the voting machine contract. The Automatic Voting Machine Company, of Jamestown, N. Y., said at the time of submitting its bid that it could furnish 500 machines by November. The Poole Manufacturing Company, whose bid is $35,000 under that of the Jamestown concern, said it could furnish 300 or 400.

Armstrong said Commissioner E. V. Babcock would be out of the city for a few days, but that on his return something probably would be done in regard to voting machines. He emphasized the importance of picking a machine that would not get out of order.

Suicide's Widow, Brother Wed, Sure It's Right

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 11.—(INS.)—Thoroughly convinced they have done the right thing Florence and Edward Keller were spending the first day of their honeymoon today. They were married yesterday.

Florence's husband, Edward's brother, Henry Keller, committed suicide by inhaling gas last April. He wrote while he was dying:

"I'll do you both more harm dead than alive. I die hating Florence and my brother."

Mothers of both the 22-year-old bride and the 24-year-old bridegroom attended the ceremony. Mrs. William H. Whitman of Philadelphia, Florence's mother said:

"I am glad Florence and Edward are brave enough to face the world and marry. They have done no wrong."

The Rev. G. S. Harper, who performed the ceremony, said:

"I wonder if a lot of other people in this world would have managed so well if they had been placed in the same position as these young people. I wish them much happiness and peace."

Later this week the young couple expect to motor to Canton, O., to visit Edward's father, who was not well enough to attend the ceremony.

Florence has said that she married Henry in 1929 because he threatened to commit suicide if she did not. She said:

"You can tell everyone that Edward and I are supremely happy. I feel that this time I have done the right thing."

BRITISH STAVE OFF TRIBESMEN'S ATTACKS UPON PESH

PLANES ROUT BESIEGING AFRIDIS

Indian Rebels, With Stolen Dynamite, Plot Destruction Of Transportation Facilities

International News Service.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—Fierce hand-to-hand fighting, backed by an uproar of exploding air bombs, resounded on the Northwestern Indian frontier today as British troops and invading Afridi tribesmen engaged in sharp clashes.

Bullets spattered the ancient walls of Peshawar, gateway to the famous Khyber Pass and one of Britain's important military strongholds, for whose possession the swarthy, swiftly-moving hillmen repeatedly have organized strong attacks.

Advices to the London Daily Herald stated that after several earlier skirmishes, designed to draw British defense forces from strategic positions, the Afridi pounced upon a detachment of Indian cavalry patrolling the outskirts of Peshawar and killed six troopers. Immediately afterward, they attacked a military supply depot near a railway station, within the shadow of the city walls, and set fire to a warehouse.

Cavalry gave hot pursuit and Royal Air Force planes rained bombs upon the Afridi, but the extent of the hillmen's casualties could not be ascertained.

It was revealed that an expected Afridi mass attack was merely a ruse heralded throughout the border region by spies to distract attention from a more dangerous attack by tribesmen on the Royal Air Force base at Risalpur, and the blowing up of bridges to disrupt communication and transport lines. Afridi armed with dynamite, stolen from the Khyber Railway, were reported moving toward the bridges in an attempt to destroy them.

Women Proprietors Stricken Testing "Left-Over" After Victim Sips Potion, Goes

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Agnes Orlikowski, 19, in attempting suicide last night, poisoned two women besides herself.

She went into a Logan Square confectionery and ordered a pineapple soda. Unnoticed, she mixed 20 grains of poison with the soda, took several swallows, walked across the street and collapsed in a park.

Mrs. Anna Graves and Mrs. Hope Dwelly, managers of the shop, noticed the abandoned soda and thought Miss Orlikowski walked out because it was spoiled. They each took a swallow, pronounced it satisfactory and forgot about the episode.

A few minutes later, both became ill and collapsed. A physician administered an antidote, and neither was in a serious condition today.

Miss Orlikowski, rushed to a hospital, was in a critical condition. No motive for her attempt could be advanced by her father, a policeman.

2 MEN STABBED IN POOL CLASH

Ill feeling between whites and Negroes in the Paulson avenue district this morning was climaxed by an attack upon two white men by a gang of Negroes, one of the victims being seriously hurt. The victims are Gilbert Davage, 22, of Montezuma street, and Theodore Kohlet, 24, of 1372 Paulson avenue.

A week ago crowds of Negroes and whites rioted near the new Paulson avenue swimming pool, the whites protesting against the Negroes using the pool.

Davage and Kohlet were walking in Paulson avenue near Renfrew street when attacked by six Negroes, police say. Razors and knives were used freely and when police arrived they found the two men on the sidewalk.

At the Pittsburgh Hospital it was said Davage had suffered a fractured skull and severe stab wounds. His condition is critical. Kohlet was stabbed in the neck. No arrests were made.

California Justices Ready For Session in Prison; Precautions to Be Taken

Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 11.—In a hearing believed to be without precedent in American legal history, the justices of the California Supreme Court will assemble inside the walls of Folsom Prison Thursday night to hear from the lips of a "life termer" the arguments of which he bases his appeal for a pardon.

This was all but definitely decided today after two official groups had spent Sunday mapping further procedure in the case of Warren K. Billings, serving a life sentence for complicity in the Preparedness Day bomb outrage.

Members of the State Prison Board, meeting at Folsom, outlined what they believe is the safest method of conducting the extraordinary session. Charles L. Neumiller, chairman of the board, then conferred by long-distance telephone with Chief Justice William H. Waste in San Francisco, and the following program, which will be carried out unless some last-minute upset occurs, was jointly adopted:

The justices will go to Folsom Thursday afternoon, arriving about the time the 2,200 hardened offenders have been locked in their cells for the night. Meeting in the directors' room, the justices will open their session and Billings will be brought before them as the first and only witness. It is hoped to conclude the hearing the same night.

Every precaution will be taken, Warden Court Smith told the board, to avoid any demonstration while the judges are in the prison.

partment will send him later in the day.

He returned to his desk exactly one year older—having observed the fifty-sixth anniversary of his birth Sunday while conferring on the drought situation with Secretary of Agriculture Hyde and Vice Chairman James C. Stone, of the Federal Farm Board.

With a conference of 12 governors called for Thursday, and a general plan of co-operative aid outlined similiar to the President's Mississippi River flood-relief program, further definite action was to await the gubernatorial gathering.

Several railroads, it was reported, will file with the Interstate Commerce Commission new reduced rates on hay, livestock and water, with a view of halting the rush of livestock to market.

The corn crop will be shown in the crop report to be far below last year and the five-year average as well. The same is true of most other crops, except winter wheat.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—(INS.)—Tempered by cooler weather and occasional scattered showers, the drouth of the past few weeks continued throughout the Middle West today.

In general the rains were heavier than the "dry weather" showers of last week, and in some quarters considerable relief was afforded, but the U. Six men, held after arrest by constables from Alderman Martin J. CHURCH ASSAILS N. Y. SHOWS

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—The Catholic church has begun a drive through public opinion to clean up the New York stage which it denounces as an "outrage of public decency."

The campaign, under the auspices of Cardinal Hayes, is directed by Msgr. Michael J. Lavelle, rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral, who in a letter to his parishioners declares the New York stage this summer had sunk so low that it had become the "dishonor of America's finest, noblest and most hospitable of cities."

Though neither is named in the bulletin, productions deemed particularly objectionable are Earl Carroll's "Vanities," which has brought the producer and several principals into court on charges of public indecency, and "Lysistrata," ancient classic of Aristophanes.

FOLLOWS BRIDE IN ENDING LIFE

BUDAPEST, Aug. 11.—(INS.)—Overcome with grief over the recent death of his wife, the former Dorothy Arents, of New York, Jules de Konkoly-Thege, wealthy and aristocratic young Hungarian, committed suicide at Midaros, Norway, today, according to word received here.

Konkoly-Thege had been taken to Midaros by the parents of his wife, Mr. and Mrs. George Arents, of New York, in the hope of lifting him out of the melancholia which had beset him since she took poison in her hotel room here, during their honeymoon.

A verdict of accidental death was returned in the case of Mrs. Konkoly-Thege, but later evidence indicated she had taken her own life. She had complained of being a "wall-flower," unable to enjoy life in this country because of her ignorance of the language.

S. motor transport and air service. In 1926 he joined the staff of the Boston American. He is survived by a wife and a son.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—More than a hundred employes in the city street cleaning department went to new posts today in a shake-up calculated to disrupt any schemes for using city garbage scows to land liquor in New York.

The wholesale transfers were the upshot of delivery of eight hundred bags of liquor to an ash dump by a city garbage barge, which was raided recently by customs men.

GIRL HURT IN COLLISION

Miss Anna Jacobs, 16, of 1014 Freyburg street, was cut and bruised this morning when the automobile in which she was riding collided with another car in the Becks Run road. She was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital. Police arrested Frank Negri, 26, of 216 Morlin street, with whom she was riding. Another girl passenger riding with Negri escaped uninjured.

Mrs. Marie Henger, 26, and her daughter, Marie, 2, of 2758 Churchview avenue, were cut and bruised when an automobile in which they were riding collided with another car on the Beaver Falls-New Castle road yesterday. They were treated at Providence Hospital, Rochester.

A hit-run motorist struck Frances Loftus, 16, of 220 Merrimac street, as she stepped from the safety platform at the Duquesne Heights incline last night. The girl was taken home after being treated by a physician.

Police today were seeking the hit-run driver who knocked down William Chandler, 26, a Negro, of 535 Gold way, Homestead, in Eighth avenue, West Homestead. Chandler received treatment for lacerations and bruises at the Homestead Hospital.

Carl Carlson, 24, of Center street, Springdale, suffered two fractured ribs and bruises, police said, when knocked down by a car near his home. The driver was not arrested.

the names of the owners of C.5088. He said he assumed the number of the bombing plane was disguised, but that inspectors in the Chicago area were investigating. He declared:

"This is the first definite report which has been made to us of such criminal use of aircraft since the government aeronautical service came into existence in 1927."

COMPOSED OF DYNAMITE

The bombs which failed to explode were made of dynamite wrapped in adhesive tape, with fuses attached. The aerial attack followed several explosions near the Diamond Mine Company's plant and that of the Mador, Holt and Young Company.

County authorities wired officials at Harrisburg, Ill., and other Southern Illinois towns to be on the lookout for the plane. It also was indicated that another appeal would be made to Gov. Sampson for troops. The governor has refused to send them, stating he believed that detectives could do more to break up violence than could troops.

The mines in this section were closed down April 1, because of disagreements over wages and working conditions, and while a vote was announced as overwhelmingly in favor of a strike, it never was authorized by the United Mine Workers of America. In recent weeks, most of the mines have been reopened and announced that they were proceeding at almost normal rate of production.

Dynamitings and other forms of violence followed, and 98 men have been enjoined in Federal Court against interference with the mines.

One of the children told a friend several days ago their father intended to kill them.

Mabel Willebrandt Sued By Former Dry Agent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition enforcement, David Lawrence, writer, the Current News Features, Inc., and Hilmar Baukhage, all of Washington, today were named defendants in a $200,000 damage suit filed by Gus O. Nations, of St. Louis, in the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

The suit is based on statements contained in a publication August 14, 1929, made in one of a series of articles by Mrs. Willebrandt on the "Inside of Prohibition." In an advance notice of the article, it was said she would tell "how she had to fight the Anti-Saloon League to remove a crooked but popular agent."

Nations said that as a result of the publication of the Willebrandt articles he had been brought into disrepute, and injured in the performance of his duties as a director of the Anti-Saloon League and as an attorney for the league in Missouri.

Called from Sunday School, Scouts Fight Field Fire

SLIPPERY ROCK, Pa., Aug. 11.—Thirty Boy Scouts were called from Sunday school here yesterday to fight a fire on the country estate of Mrs. Carroll Miller, political leader of Pittsburgh. The scouts, led by Scoutmaster Charles McDonald, rushed to the farm, two miles distant, in trucks.

High on the banks of Wolf Creek some fishermen had dropped a cigaret stub and the dry roots of grass and weeds had ignited, causing what resembled a peat fire. The top soil and vegetable roots were smoldering to a depth of several inches and the Scouts were compelled to use shovels and pickaxes, and carry water from the creek to subdue the embers.

Heat, far more intense than that engendered by grass or brush flames, repeatedly drove the boys to the creek for relief. After several hours' work the fire was under control and valuable crops in adjacent fields were saved from whatever ruin they have escaped because of the long drought.

Policeman Among 4 Saved From River by Convicts

OSSINING, N. Y., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Four convicts were being hailed as heroes today for their rescue of two men and their wives from drowning in the Hudson River in front of Sing Sing prison.

Three years ago, three young men drowned at almost the same spot while hundreds of convicts looked on helplessly fearing to lend a hand lest they draw forth the deadly fire of their keepers.

Told thereafter to use "discretion," the guards today picked short-termers Irving Brown, Joseph Oates, Anthony Triano and David Weller to rescue the men and women in the boat.

Weller and Triano jumped into the river while the others stood on the dock, grasping long firemen's hooks. The rowboat, filling rapidly and pushed by Weller and Triano, reached the end of the dock with the gunwales awash. Brown and Oates held it up with their hooks while the four in it scrambled ashore. Then the boat sank.

The prisoners then found they had saved a "cop," J. D. Roosa, chief of police of the New York Central Lines, and his wife, and Roosa's brother-in-law, Albert Graff, and his wife.

North Side Woman Receives $100 for Best Entry From Tri-State, Pittsburgh Area

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 11.—The 1930's have won. The battle between the "gay nineties" and the up-to-the-minute 1930's has been settled, with awards given for the best letters received. The Marion Davies style contest was waged to decide whether it were better to wear the long, uncomfortable, tight-waisted dresses worn by our mothers or the simple and charming garb of today.

In offering prizes, Miss Davies is giving $500 for the best letter written by a woman and $500 for the best letter written by a man on a discussion of these styles. Miss Davies further offered 10 prizes of $100 each to be given for the best letter written in each of 10 different areas or sections of the United States.

The major prize of $100 for the best letter written by a woman was awarded to Miss Minna Marcus, of 10 Wilmer street, Rochester, N. Y. The $500 prize for the best letter written by a man goes to C. L. McDonald, of the Hauser Construction Company, Riverside, Cal.

PICKED FOR ORIGINALITY

In making these awards, the judges chose these two for their originality, their interest and the soundness of their arguments.

The 10 contestants to win the $100 prizes in their areas are as follows:

T. H. Black, of 610 Jamison avenue, Sedro-Wooley, Wash., from the Seattle area, which comprises the states of Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho.

Barbara Baxley, of 2320 Spaulding avenue, Berkeley, Cal., from the California area, comprising California, Nevada, Arizona, Utah and New Mexico.

Kay Crews, of 116 Carolina street, San Antonio, Tex., from the San Antonio area, comprising Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas.

WON FOR NEW YORK AREA

Marguerite Duncan Jacobi, of 3705 Seventy-ninth street, Jackson Heights, L. I., from the New York area, comprising New York and New Jersey.

Irving Janger, of 1826 North Nineteenth street, Omaha, Neb., from the Omaha area, comprising Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, Iowa and Minnesota.

Mrs. Anna B. Dunaway, of 6757 Paxton avenue, Chicago, from the Chicago area, comprising Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri, Michigan, Indiana and Kentucky.

Mary S. Sauers, of Muth street, North Side, Pittsburgh, from the Pittsburgh area, comprising Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia.

Mrs. W. F. Donovan, of 30 Oakview terrace, Jamaica Plain, Mass., from the Boston area, comprising Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Mary K. Batte, of 2121 New York avenue, N. W., Washington, from the Washington area, comprising the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and Delaware.

OTHERS WERE DESERVING

It was very hard to decide against Mrs. Frances Sangster, of 820 South Lucerne boulevard, Los Angeles, for the $100 prize in her area. Her letter deserves honorable mention, it was so breezy, so amusing and so natural. Mary Janes Paumier, of 823 Forest Drive, Wooster, O., sent another letter deserving honorable mention.

Mrs. Garner wrote a clearly defined letter and it was difficult to decide between her and the prize winner from Chicago. Evelyn Asselin received a vote for the Boston area but Mrs. W. F. Donovan carried the Boston area by a majority. Mrs. C. O. Gotham, of Syracuse, N. Y., and Dorothy Stevens, of Cleveland, were others who deserve special mention.

WON PRAISE FROM JUDGES

Another letter from the San Antonio area that won the praise of two judges was written by Mrs. Hastings Moore, of Tulsa, Okla.

It is estimated that at least 200,000 letters were received.

The judges, Eleanor Meherin, of the San Francisco Call; Amos Parrish, of 580 Fifth avenue, New York City; Henry Clive, of 1434 North Crescent Heights boulevard, Hollywood; Helen Koues, of Good Housekeeping Magazine, New York City, and Louella O. Parsons, motion picture editor of Universal Service. The letters were judged solely on merit and on the basis of the most intelligent discussion at hand.

MISS SAUERS AT HOME WITH HER GREAT WHITE PET

Miss Sauers wrote that the styles of the 1890's will never come back because in this day women are self-expressive.

Pittsburgh's Prize-Winner Enjoyed Style Contest, Hopes Luck Holds

Miss Mary D. Sauers today is proud possessor of a check for $100, reward for her imagination, industry and intelligence. It was waiting for her when she returned from her vacation from the accounting department of the Bessemer and Lake Erie Railroad.

She was one of 10 who won $100 each in the Florodora essay contest conducted by the Sun-Telegraph and other Hearst newspapers in conjunction with "The Florodora Girl," Marion Davies' picture of the "gay nineties" which recently played in Pittsburgh theaters.

Miss Sauers, who lives in Muth street, a hilly spot overlooking East street, North Side, will not find the check a disagreeable surprise. No one would. But, aside from the money, she gets considerable satisfaction over placing in the winning group.

She wrote in her essay that she believed the styles of the nineties would never return, because the attitudes of women and men of today differ.

DIFFERENT NOW

Then, the woman was subjected to the man's opinions—his wish was a command. She wore clumsy, ill-fitting, uncomfortable garments because the male forced them on her.

Today, the woman is self-expressive in her attire. And man today, Miss Sauers believes, is satisfied that the woman with the short skirt is just as fine as the one who was shackled with too-tight clothes.

That was the gist of her essay, which won the $100. She's sincere about it, and spoke her mind, she admits.

HAS WINNING HABIT

But this was not her first essay contest prize. She said:

"It's my twentieth. It is the seventh award from Sun-Telegraph contests. In fact, it's obvious that writing or competing in these tests is a great diversion for me.

"Once before I won $100. In other instances the prizes were less, but none the less gratifying.

"Five of these were in the Zain ad contest, and I got $10 in 'Can a Woman Be an Office-Wife?'

DEEPLY INTERESTED

"As to the Florodora test, I was very much interested, both because it concerned Miss Davies, a great actress, and because styles are interesting. I read a lot, and in winter see the movies once or twice a week on my way home. Outside of my job, these are my principal interests, although I do make a garden in the summer—when it rains. So I have lots of time to write in contests. I hope the Sun-Telegraph continues having them, win or lose."

STORK BELATED ON YORK VISIT

GLAMIS, Scotland, Aug. 11.—(INS.)—Strong patrols today kept the growing crowds of curious from approaching too closely to the walls of Glamis Castle, within whose confines the Duchess of York is hourly expecting birth of a child.

Anxiety caused throughout the nation by delay of the event, expected since July 25, was allayed with announcements from Glamis Castle that the Duchess was in the best of health.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Sun-tanned and smiling, King George returned today to Buckingham Palace, accompanied by the Queen, at the end of a fortnight's yachting holiday at Cowes. It is understood the King's health was much benefited by his outing.

The King and Queen will remain at the palace only until Wednesday, when they will go to Sandringham for a short stay before proceeding to Balmoral. It was believed they would call at Glamis Castle on their way north. Every day, during her stay at Cowes, the Queen wrote a cheering note to the Duchess of York, who, at her ancient family home, is awaiting the stork's arrival.

Birthday Greeting Sent Hoover by King George

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—King George of England yesterday felicitated President Hoover on his fifty-sixth birthday. He sent the following message to the White House:

"It is with great pleasure, Mr. President, that I offer you on the occasion of your birthday my warmest felicitations, together with my sincere good wishes for your continued health and happiness."

AVIATRIX SAVED IN PLANE DIVE

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—An airplane operated by Vera Brown, 30, Detroit newspaper woman, plunged 1,500 feet into Lake St. Clair, near here, but Miss Brown escaped serious injury.

The woman flier was rescued from one of the wings of the partly submerged plane and was taken to a hospital here. She was found to have suffered a sprained ankle, bruises and possibly a fracture of the jaw.

The plane went into a spin, witnesses said, after Miss Brown had flown over the lake for some time, stunting for the amusement of bathers.

VALLEE IN TOWN HIDES IN LIFT

They hid Rudy Vallee in an elevator in the City-County Building today to protect him from his palpitating public—but the palpitating public refused to be hidden from.

They surged about the elevator (the public was 80 per cent female) and gazed fondly at their hero. Also in the elevator were the elevator operator and Ed Lang, the rotund director of public works.

Rudy came to town to play the saxaphone and croon. When he reached the City-County Building, to be presented the key to the city, his palpitating public more or less rushed him.

The police rescued Rudy and, after he had enjoyed a rest in the elevator, he was escorted to the steps of the building and given the key by John Herron, the president of Council.

MISSING GIRL DRY SPY SLAIN

Body Identified; Undercover Agent's Remains Found in Sewer; Revenge Motive

International News Service.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 11.—Underworld haunts of this city were raked today as police sought the murderers of Clara (Pat) Patterson, attractive hotel attache and supposedly government undercover agent.

The body of a young woman found in a drainage sewer near the city Friday night was tentatively identified as that of Miss Patterson yesterday, and authorities immediately accepted the theory that she had been "put on the spot" because of her activities against the liquor traffic.

The girl disappeared from her hotel under mysterious circumstances the day the body was discovered. Hotel attendants found her room unoccupied and a note on a table declaring that she had been "forced to leave town."

Investigation disclosed she had informed fellow employes that she was an undercover agent, and claimed that many raids during the past few months had resulted from her reports.

The girl came here from Little Rock.

Federal Prohibition Agent E. J. Banet said the lodging of Miss Patterson had been used as a trap for liquor purchasers.

JUDGE STARTS WAR ON CAPONE

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—(INS.)—Judge John H. Lyle, of Municipal Court, today declared war on Al (Scarface) Capone and Chicago's gangland.

Referring to reports that the North Side gang, formerly headed by George (Bugs) Moran, had been taken over by Capone and placed under the direction of Ted Newberry, Capone lieutenant, Lyle called Capt. Hugh McCarthy, of the police force, before him and issued his ultimatum. He said:

"I see from the papers that the so-called Moran gang has been ousted and that a man named Newberry has been placed in charge by Capone.

"I suggest that you raid the headquarters of the gang and arrest all gunmen, crooks or men connected with the crime outfit."

NORRIS PRIMARY TESTS HOOVER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(Universal.)—With primaries to be held in five states tomorrow, the eyes of political Washington are focused on Nebraska, where Senator George W. Norris is up for renomination.

The conservative regulars supporting W. M. Stebbins for Norris' seat have made this appeal:

The deciding factor is doubtless the fact that Senator Norris is a leader of the progressive movement, and a candidate for the presidency in 1932.

"Vote for Stebbins and stand by Hoover."

Thus a Norris victory can be interpreted only as a repudiation of the White House.

Norris, an outstanding Progressive, balted his party in 1928 to support Alfred E. Smith for the presidency, incurring the wrath of the "regulars" in the G. O. P. ranks.

Britain Reported Considering Tariff

LONDON, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—The Daily Herald, government organ, today said that individual ministers, in making plans for the forthcoming imperial conference, were considering the idea of a general tariff of 10 per cent for revenue purposes, with a rebate for the dominions.

The project was said by the paper to have been submitted in a memorandum by H. D. Henderson, head of the government's economic advisory staff, and to have reached a stage of discussion only as yet, the matter not having been broached in the cabinet.

Flask With Arctic Aid Plea 28 Years Old Found in Ice

NOVAYA ZEMLYAL, U. S. S. R., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—A cork flask containing a message written in 1902 by Evelyn Briggs Baldwin, leader of an American exploring expedition to Franz Joseph Land, was found by a member of the Soviet Arctic expedition to the same northern country.

The flask was frozen in the ice on the rock shore of the northern section of this island. It was picked up by Gregory Nikitin, who is on his way to join the party already established in Franz Joseph Land.

The message, discovered 28 years late, asks that shipment of fuel, sleds, dogs and food be rushed.

Baldwin was leader of the Baldwin-Ziegler Arctic expedition, which in 1902 established a base in Franz Joseph Land for an attempt to reach the North Pole.

Unger Dead, Legal Battle Goes on for His Body

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—The legal battle over the custody of Aaron Unger, 48, wealthy New York candy manufacturer, did not end with his death yesterday, but was continued today for possession of his body.

Unger died in the apartments of Amelia Phillips, at Landsdowne, near here, while proceedings were pending—instituted by his wife and other New York relatives—to have him released from the custody of Miss Phillips, his nurse.

It was alleged that Unger, an invalid, was held virtually a captive in Miss Phillips' apartment. She fought the proceedings, declaring that she was engaged to marry him.

Mrs. Unger today obtained a court order halting the funeral arrangements and seeking to have the body turned over to the wife and her children.

Another suit that will remain undecided, because of the manufacturer's death, is that brought against him in New York by Miss Phillips' divorced husband, Jack Strouse, an actor. Strouse sought $100,000 for alienation of affections.

Unger had been ill for nearly two years. Miss Phillips nursed him and administered his affairs through a power of attorney. Recently, Unger was declared mentally incompetent by a New York court.

FORBES PRAISES HEARST PROFIT SHARING PLAN

Famous Financial Writer Points Out 10 Per Cent Yield on Stock Possible

Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 11.—Outstanding facts about the $50,000,000 cumulative participating stock issue offered by the Hearst papers to their readers and employes and to the general public were discussed here by B. C. Forbes, famous financial observer and editor.

Forbes, whose millions of readers find his daily comment on business and finance as easy to absorb as a summer novel, laid special emphasis on the profit-sharing feature of the issue.

MAY YIELD 10 PER CENT

He referred to 400,000 shares which Mr. Hearst has reserved for his army of employes and executives. While the stock is a 7 per cent stock, it has a 3 per cent participating feature, in addition, so that its investors may receive up to 10 per cent on their money. The price to the public is $25. Hearst employes are purchasing it at $24. Forbes said:

"Here is one big organization that comes along and extends to the public the same privilege enjoyed by its employes. The only difference is that the public has to pay $1 more a share.

"Mr. Hearst's action in preserving this stock to be acquired by the men and women who are helping him maintain and develop his immense chain of American newspapers is in harmony with the most approved, the most modern practice.

ESTABLISHED PRACTICE

"General Motors, the Pennsylvania Railroad, American Telephone and Telegraph, United States Steel Corporation, General Electric, New York Central, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of California (and other Standard Oil companies), International Harvester, American Tobacco, Western Union, Procter and Gamble, Swift and Company, Eastman Kodak, are among notably successful companies that have interested their employes in building up the business by having them become financially interested.

BEST YARDSTICK

"There are many positions, especially higher up, where the only feasible yardstick is the total net profit earned by the enterprise. Hence the stimulating effect of profit-sharing plans, particularly in the case of executives.

"The Hearst plan combines employe stock ownership with profit-sharing.

"The generous return of 7 per cent is offered on the preferred stock which employes may purchase at 4 per cent under par, thus giving them an income yield of better than 7 per cent.

"On top of this there is the profit-sharing provision, which makes it possible for the employe-owner as well as any owner outside of the Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., to receive an additional 3 per cent a year on his investment.

OFFER UNPARALLELED

"This represents a total yield of 10 per cent for the outside owner and better than 10 per cent for the employe on the amount he has invested.

"There is not in the whole list of securities on the New York Stock Exchange a single attractive issue that is selling at a price to yield the investor anything like 10 per cent—indeed, it would be difficult to pick out safe issues yielding as much as 7 per cent.

"Authoritative figures show that the companies comprising Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., (the new corporation) have been steadily increasing their net earnings. The total of slightly better than 10 millions in 1926 increased to nearly 13 millions ($12,855,000) last year.

"The average net earnings after paying bond interest, income tax, depreciation, etc., was well over three times the dividend requirement on the $50,000,000 of 'A' preferred stock now being offered employes and the public.

NEW INCENTIVE

"Such results having been attained during the years the Hearst employes did not enjoy the privilege of stock ownership, sur[illegible] it is reasonable to figure that even better results will be brought about now that a new incentive has been furnished.

"It is worth noting that Mr. Hearst personally will not draw a cent in dividends on his common stock until the owners (employes and public) of the class A, cumulative participating stock, have received 7 per cent dividends.

"Also that the additional 3 per cent begins to accrue to the employe and other owners of this issue after Mr. Hearst's common stock receives only $1.75 a share.

UNUSUAL CONCESSION

"In other words, Hearst employes and other owners of the issue rank ahead of Mr. Hearst to the tune of 7 per cent of their shares.

"The opportunity is now presented Hearst employes to become part owners of the largest publishing organization in America, to participate in its profits on a generous basis. So, too, the public can participate in the profits on a very attractive basis ahead of Mr. Hearst himself."

Yeggs Carry off Weighty Safe, Profit $3

READING, Pa., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—For the pains it cost a gang of thieves to carry a quarter-ton safe out of the State House Bakery, load it on one of the bakery's own trucks and blow it open on a blind road on Mt. Penn, they got $3.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—(INS.)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, who is expected to lead the fight on the floor of the Republican state convention next month for adoption of a party platform pledging repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, predicted such a plank in an announcement today.

Dr. Butler said he also believed the Democratic state convention would adopt a wet plank.

CHINESE TRADE SLUMP STUDIED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(Universal.)—In an attempt to halt an alarming drop in trade with China, a Senate Foreign Relations sub-committee today had completed plans for hearings late this month to consider remedial measures.

Recommendations will be sought from American business men representing all sections of the country at hearings in cities on the East and West coasts.

Three primary reasons for the trade slump have been given the committee by Assistant Secretary of Commerce Julius Klein. They are renewal of civil war, a lowering of prices in world markets and the low price of silver. China pays for its imports with silver.

Senator Key Pittman (Dem.), of Nevada, heads the sub-committee.

FARMER FINDS NEPHEW SLAIN

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 11—(AP.)—Clifton Borneman, 30, was found shot to death on his uncle's farm at Arnold, 30 feet from a shotgun, both barrels of which had been discharged. Officials, who said an inquest would be held here, declared it appeared he had leaned the gun against his chest and pulled the triggers.

Borneman a little more than a month ago caused a police investigation when he reported he had been beaten by three men and robbed of $300 drawn from a bank for a honeymoon. He had married a Baltimore girl against the wishes of her parents.

Early Sunday Borneman went to the home of a neighbor and got his uncle's double-barreled shotgun, which had been loaned. Later the uncle, Henry Hirsch, alarmed at his absence, started a search and found the body.

BODIES OF SLAIN COUPLE FOUND

STOW, Mass., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—The bodies of William Stefanovicz, Stow farmer, and his wife, missing since May, were discovered in a shallow grave in a woodlot near the farm by four youths, Detective Edward P. O'Neill said it was a double murder.

The disappearance of the couple first attracted attention from state and county authorities this week. Joe Stefanosky a farm hand employed by Stefanovicz, had told neighbors the couple had gone to Chicago. Meanwhile he took charge of the farm and disappeared a few days ago. Police said he took with him $800 in rents and the proceeds from auctioned cattle.

The discovery of the bodies recalled the disappearance of a previous owner of the farm, "Tiger" Hale, 70 years ago. He was believed to have been killed, robbed of $4,000, and his body tossed into a quicksand.

$250,000 GALE KILLS 1, HURTS 7

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 11 (AP.)—A 70-mile gale struck Louisville and surrounding territory, killed one person, injured seven and caused property damage estimated at more than $250,000. The storm hit Lexington a short time later and lightning fired a barn at the Kentucky Association race track. Sixteen thoroughbreds and the structure were destroyed, with loss set at $55,000.

A 14-year-old Negro boy was killed at New Albany, Ind., across the Ohio River from Louisville, when his skull was crushed by a falling tree limb. The seven persons injured included four Louisville firemen hurt while fighting fires caused by the storm.

One Louisville building, worth $50,000, collapsed, and another, valued at $25,000, was struck by lightning and destroyed by fire. The loss at New Albany and Jeffersonville, Ind., was set at $100,000.

SHOT IN FIGHT OVER CHILD

MARION, O., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Hayes Ashbrook, 45, was shot by Lloyd Bensley, 30, at Prospect, O., 16 miles south of here, as a result of an argument over Ashbrook's four-year-old son, according to Sheriff John A. Francis, who arrested Bensley.

Bensley married Ashbrook's divorced wife, and Bensley and the woman have had custody of the child. Officers said Ashbrook drove to the Bensley home to see the child and during an argument Bensley is said to have produced a pistol. Ashbrook took the pistol from Bensley and ran from the house, Bensley following with another weapon, it is said.

The shooting took place in the yard of a neighbor, where Ashbrook is said to have fired back once at his pursuer, who then opened fire. Three bullets struck Ashbrook.

The house was wrecked in the ensuing explosion. Galko was fatally burned. Pelis will recover, doctors say, but the woman's condition was declared critical.

Directs A&P's buying

If you hired a personal agent to buy food in the markets of the world for your own table, you would give him, first, money for the purchase and shipping costs; second, money to cover his expenses; and, third, a salary for his services . . . You, yourself, would choose the kind of food he would buy.

That's just what you do when you trade with A & P.

Of every dollar which you pay over A & P counters, 83½ cents go to food producing communities* in exchange for the food you ask for.

A & P's part is to find out what you want—by what you order in its stores—and to spend your 83½ cents as you direct. Of the rest of your dollar, 14 cents stay in your neighborhood to run A & P stores.

All you pay A & P for its services is the remaining 2½ cents.

80TH VETS PAY TRIBUTE TO HERO DEAD

Thousands Join Ex-Soldiers In Memorial Services Closing Johnstown Meet

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 11.—Tribute was paid to the soldier dead of the 80th (Blue Ridge) Division, at two memorial services, which yesterday marked the close of the four-day reunion here. Several thousand residents of the town joined the 80th Division men in paying homage to their dead comrades.

Many veterans who were unable to attend the business sessions of the convention made week-end motor trips to this city, arriving in time for the banquet Saturday night and the services yesterday. Jerry J. Madden, of Pittsburgh, who has been elected national commander of the 80th Division Veterans Association, estimated the convention attendance at 3,500.

SERVICE IN STADIUM

The Rev. Edward A. Wallace, of Manhattan Beach, N. Y., division chaplain, acted as celebrant of the solemn high mass held in St. John's Gaulbert Church. The Rev. R. J. Mullane, of Johnstown, acted as deacon; the Rev. Francis McGee, subdeacon, and James Caulfield, of St. Mary's Emmittsburg, seminarian. Msgr. John N. Codoie, vicar general of the Altoona diocese, preached the sermon.

The general divisional memorial services were held during the afternoon in Point Stadium. The Rev. Thomas W. Evans, former Army chaplain of Nant-y-Glo, pronounced the invocation. Thomas Bender, of Lilly, Pa., formerly sergeant major of the First Battalion, 305th Engineers, was in charge of the service. A brief farewell address was made by Oscar C. Mullhollen, retiring national commander. The sermon was delivered by Father Wallace, who spoke of his personal experiences. Lieut. Frank Schoble, Jr., of Philadelphia, who lost his sight in the service, described his last vision of his comrades, the picture of them going into battle at Nantillois.

VETS BAND PLAYS

The Menoher Post band, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Johnstown, furnished the music and there were several soloists. The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Dr. C. A. Owens, of Johnstown. William A. Walsh, of the post band, sounded taps.

The veterans at their business session Friday passed resolutions expressing the loss felt by them through the death of Congressman Stephen G. Porter, honorary member of the association; Col. Earl D. Church, late commissioner of pensions, a life member of the association, and Justice Anderson, of Charleston, W. Va., an honorary member.

Pair Held in Ohio On Bigamy Charge

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—John Reining and Mrs. Ethel Reining, arrested in Newark, O., are wanted on bigamy and perjury charges preferred here by John Torok, Crucible, Pa., who alleged Mrs. Reining is his wife, and married Reining in Brownsville July 11, without the formality of a divorce.

Reining, formerly a boarder at the Torok home, also is sought for questioning on reports that he has a first wife from whom he has not been divorced.

Stepdaughters Ask Share in Estate

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—The $3,000,000 estate of the late Capt. Edward Morrison, founder of the Morrison Hotel, is again the object of a court fight.

A hearing is scheduled on a petition by Morrison's two stepdaughters, Alice Burnstein Schenker and Margaret Burnstein Beers, to be permitted to participate in the estate. Sixteen cousins and other distant relatives oppose the plea.

Nervous, Tired, Felt Miserable

HOLLYWOOD AND BROADWAY CHAT WITH LOCAL AMUSEMENT NEWS

Fairbanks, Jr., Isn't to Play Juvenile in 'Lightnin'' After All

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 11.—Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., will not play the juvenile lead in "Lightnin'," To explain why necessitates a little trip behind the scenes in Hollywood.

Out here, the word "billing" is an all important one. It refers to the manner in which the player's name is featured in advertising a picture. All of the important stars have clauses in their contracts protecting them on this point. And it so happens that Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.'s "billing" clause conflicted with Fox' promotion plans.

In a Will Rogers picture, of course, Rogers' name overshadows all others. But that was all right. Doug Jr.'s contract reads that he shall not receive worse than second billing. When arrangements had been completed to borrow Doug Jr., from First National, however, it was discovered that Louise Dresser had a similar contract.

D. Fairbanks, Jr.

With matters thus at a deadlock, Fox appealed to Miss Dresser, and she conceded a point for the single picture.

By this time though, First National had come to the opinion that a juvenile lead in a Rogers picture is not of enough importance for a player whom they are building towards stardom.

So, it's all off, and somebody else will get the role.

Silly, isn't it. But how important in Hollywood!

JACKIE REMINISCES

Jackie Coogan, now grown tall and making his audible debut as Tom Sawyer, tells how he first met Charlie Chaplin.

One night, he was called on the stage of a Los Angeles vaudeville house by Annette Kellerman to do some imitations. Chaplin witnessed the performance from the third row. After the show, he sought Jackie's parents and asked to speak to the boy.

Jackie, then four and a half years old, was asleep in an overstuffed chair. Coogan woke his son and introduced him to Chaplin.

"Hello, Mr. Chaplin," said Jackie, offering a hand. Then he promptly fell asleep again.

Chaplin laughed and asked if the boy could be re-awakened. When Jackie got his eyes open, Chaplin sat beside him and talked for several minutes. At the end of the conversation, he made the request for the services of the boy in a picture. Thus, Jackie became "The Kid."

BETTY AT COLUMBIA

Having returned from Alaska with "The Silver Horde" company, Evelyn Brent tells me she is going over to Columbia to make "Madonna of the Streets." This is the story that Harry Cohn bought from Edwin Carewe. Years ago, Eddie made it as a silent film starring Alla Nazimova. Before that it was a story called "The Ragged Messenger." The production gets under way soon, and will be one of the important pictures on Columbia's new program.

ANOTHER AIR EPIC

Before "Hell's Angels" was released, William Wellman swore at the mention of another air picture. Then some of the critics remarked that the Caddo film surpassed "Wings."

Ramon Novarro.

Bill's been trying to promote a flying story ever since. At last Warners have succumbed. Even now, Lucien Hubbard, their scenario editor, is in Washington seeking government co-operation in a big special that Warners plan for next year. If they can sell the idea to federal officials, the picture will be made with government planes, dirigibles, balloons, in fact every branch of the air service.

This would be a departure from the usual thing, as other producers have hired their own planes. I believe there was one exception, when Ramon Novarro made "The Flying Fleet" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

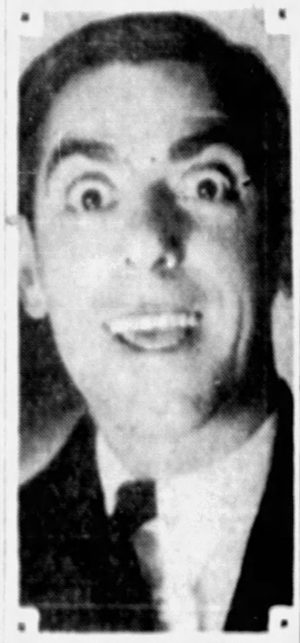
Wellman is to direct the Warner air-epic, and it's safe to say he will endeavor to top "Hell's Angels." Bill was an American ace in the war, you know.

APPLESAUCE

Wandered out on Stage No. 2 at Warner Brothers and found the entire building given over to an apple orchard set for "Children of Dreams." They were bringing in bare trees, and dozens of workmen were putting artificial leaves on them. Then the property department came along and hung real apples on the limbs. The real kick was a sign addressed to extras:

"Don't eat the apples. They have been treated."

Coming Here



Eddie Cantor, the well-known comedian, is coming to town to fulfill a stage engagement in the Stanley, beginning Thursday.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

That envelopes were first used in 1839.

That "So long!" isn't Americanese, at all, but Irish, the whole phrase being, "So long t'ye," meaning good health, etc.

That the belief that one can get ptomaine poisoning by eating oysters in months without an "R" is a relic of the period before cold storage, food preservation and modern scientific handling.

That 22 of the States have names of Indian origin.

That some mineral waters are made of marble dust.

That Benjamin de Casseres in a recent article on Gene O'Neill declared that O'Neill was born at the corner of 43rd Street and B'way, "where the Claridge now stands." We always thought that the Claridge was at 44th Street and Broadway.

That the largest building in Winnipeg is 13 stories.

That on some Jewish calendars "St. Patrick's Day" is marked off as a holiday. I said some calendars.

That most people violate the law when throwing away empty ciggie packages, because they do not destroy the stamps.

That the first Shakespearean play performed in America was given in 1751 at Williamsburg, Va.

That Chris Columbus' bones are not interred in Seville, Spain, after all. They still are in San Domingo.

That Bermuda is only about thirty miles farther from New York than from Charleston, S. C., and Nova Scotia is almost as near the island group because of the curve in the North American coastline.

That the longest stage role is Cyrano de Bergerac's.

That a new German composition called Opal Ice is now being "poured" onto the floor of the N. Y. Coliseum in the Bronx (which is in America), for amateur hockey. It is chemical stuff, made in a boiler, same as artificial ice, except that you cannot use it in highballs.

That Detroit and not New York has the distinction of owning and operating the largest system of municipal railways in the world.

That Shakespeare had a vocabulary of 16,000 words. An average person can get along with 500, but 200 is enough in the rural districts.

That the globe of the eye is moved by six muscles.

That on the west side of 3rd Ave., between 16th and 17th Sts., still stands the 2-mile post to the Bowery. At least 100 yrs. old.

The Pena Castle, whence fled King Manuel on abdicating the Portugal throne for the arms of Gaby Deslys, is maintained intact by the Republican Gov't. The chalk marks still remain on Manuel's private billiard table.

That most of the people you call a "brick" usually wind up by flinging themselves at your head.

That there is no difference between scratching the skin with a clean nail and a rusty one.

That only one in every 100,000 lives to 100.

That gold wedding rings will never cure a stye on the eye. Hot applications are the safest bet to stimulate blood circulation.

That "Valentine's Day" is called the Day for Sweethearts because birds are supposed to begin mating then.

That tomatoes and nuts are listed under "fruits."

That the first railroad in the U. S. was built in Quincy, Mass., to haul granite for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That there are two thousand seven hundred and fifty languages.

That the highest golf course in the U. S. is at Cloudcroft, New Mexico. It is atop the Sacramento Mts., 9,000 ft. above sea level.

That although fighting with fists had probably been practiced in England for many centuries prior to the advent of James Figg, historians generally agree in giving him this honor.

And that all this fuss about tree sitters is meaningless, considering the women decoys who sit and sit in the Chinatown buses.

OPENS SUCCESS SERMON SERIES

The Rev. M. Herbert Messner, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, opened his series of sermons on America's most successful citizens yesterday by speaking on Jonathan Edwards, chosen by the Literary Group of Boston as the most successful American citizen. The Literary Group arrived at its choice, the Rev. Mr. Messner said, because Edwards won the hand of a fine woman, achieved success outside of money, blessed the world with his descendants, had a religious experience satisfactory to himself, and blessed the world and glorified God through service.

Harris Keeps Film But Changes Act

"Her Unborn Child," film adaptation of the play of the same title, began its second week on the Harris screen Saturday. The stage program, however, underwent a change. Prominent in it are Victor Graff and Muriel Striker, Mary and Ann, in specialties, and Harrison's R-K-Olians, with peppy musical numbers.

ZION REVISION MEET OPENS

PRAGUE, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—The fourth world's conference of the Union of Zionist Revisionists was opened by Vladimir Jabotinsky, revisionist leader, in the presence of 240 delegates from many countries, including the United States.

Jabotinsky, reviewing the present status of the Zionist and the Revisionist movements and conditions in Palestine, sharply criticized England's mandate policy as well as that of the Zionist executive.

He asserted that the British government was not doing its duty to the Jews, but opposed demands for the transfer of the mandate to some other power.

The Jewish Telegraphic Agency reports that he condemned the present leadership of the World Zionist Organization under Dr. Chaim Weizmann even more severely than he did the British government. He said the Zionist executive had converted Zionism into a money-collecting movement and had never demanded enough protection from the British government.

SHIP CRASHES, 65 SAVED

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Running in a dense fog, the 2,222-ton steamer Caribou, owned by the Newfoundland government, crashed into a point of land near Grand Bay, off the southwest tip of Newfoundland. Sixty-five passengers, including 19 women and a few children, and the crew took to the lifeboats, and six hours later all were safely landed at Port Aux Basques, the port to which the wrecked vessel was going from North Sydney, N. S.

The vessel was crushed in from her bow to her aft engine house. She quickly filled with water and was feared to be a total loss, although efforts probably will be made to salvage 200 sacks of mail and a large quantity of freight.

The passengers and crew, in their progress toward safety, had to battle a murky fog, which made it impossible to see 500 feet, and a heavy swell caused by a gale of the previous 48 hours.

RAID EXCLUSIVE CLUB; 4 HELD

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—A fourth employe of the Pendennis Club, leading Louisville social organization for men, was arrested Sunday as a result of a raid on the club by prohibition agents Saturday.

Martin Cuneo, when arraigned before a United States commissioner on a charge of possession of liquor, pleaded not guilty and was held under $1,000 bond. E. C. Jutt, manager of the club; G. L. Kranstad, athletic director, and William J. Benninger, cigar stand proprietor, were arrested Saturday and released on bond.

The federal agents today were occupied with assorting and checking liquors seized in the raid. Labels indicating whether they were taken from members' lockers or the club's storeroom were attached to the bottles.

In summer you need this inconspicuous
sanitary protection

Never is Kotex so indispensable as in summer—with clothing reduced to a minimum—and frocks so thin and dainty.

ONE of the important reasons why smart women are so very enthusiastic about Kotex lies in its clever shaping.

This is especially desirable in summer, when one so loves to wear those thin, soft frocks.

Wear these dainty things every day, if you like. Just be sure that Kotex — no substitute — is your sanitary protection.

No outline ever shows through even the thinnest summer dresses, because Kotex is so carefully designed. The ends are rounded and tapered.

Kotex absorbs 5 times as much as the finest cotton. And even on the warmest days you'll find Kotex retains its light, delicate quality for several hours. This is largely due to the remarkable substance of which it is made — Cellucotton (not cotton) absorbent wadding.

Preferred by hospitals

Cellucotton is so superior that 85% of our leading hospitals use it in preference to fine surgical cotton.

Kotex deodorizes—so appreciated in summer. Dispose of it just as you would a piece of tissue. No washing, no embarrassment.

Kotex Company, Chicago, Illinois.

KOTEX IS SOFT . . .
1—Not a deceptive softness, that soon packs into chafing hardness. But a delicate, lasting softness.
2—Kotex filler is far lighter and cooler than cotton, yet absorbs 5 times as much.
3—Deodorizes . . . safely, thoroughly, by a special process.
4—Disposable, instantly, completely.

OPERATIC SELECTION AND COMPOSERS' BIRTHDAY PROGRAM ON RADIO BILL

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Radio Editor.

The gem among operatic love songs "Depuis le jour," from Charpentier's "Louise," will be sung by Pearl Besuner, young American soprano of the Metropolitan, when she appears as guest artist of General Motors Family Party on WCAE at 9:30. She will also sing Chaminade's "Madrigal."

Friends in England who listen to W8XK regularly for KDKA programs have requested Frederick G. Rodgers to sing "Down the River of Golden Dreams" during the 8 o'clock feature tonight.

The Stromberg Carlson Hour on KDKA at 10 p. m. will celebrate the birthday of Armas Jarnefelt, composer, with a delightful program by the Rochester Civic Orchestra.

WHAT THEY DO

Musicians go for queer things in their spare time. One man playing at WJAS is a piano tuner, another at KDKA has opened a plan of lots, still another at WCAE has taken over an amusement park. A violinist at KQV repairs automobiles during the day. A bassoon player is an accountant and a trombone player is a cook.

Warns of Danger In Indigestion

Says Gas, Belching, Pain, Threaten Serious Troubles. End Quick with new Acidine

Burning acid stomach, gnawing pain before or after eating, belching, gas, bloating, heartburn, dizziness if neglected often lead quickly to dangerous diseases, says a well known authority. Don't fool with things that don't give the right results. Ask your druggist today for Acidine, a wonderful new formula which is now being prescribed by many physicians. Stops pain and gas. Inexpensive. Get Acidine today and say good-bye to acid stomach torture.

"I am taking Acidine right now for acid stomach and gastritis," says Mrs. E. M. George of the Stock Exchange Hotel in Chicago, Ill. "I had this trouble all my life and know that Acidine will relieve me as I find it to be great and unexcelled for indigestion due to acid and fermentation."

Remember, this new Acidine is different from other stomach medicines. Contains an effective new digestant, Japtase, one grain of which promptly liquefies 800 times its own weight of starchy foods under proper conditions. Five other scientific ingredients relieve burning acid, stop gas formation, soothe irritated stomach lining. Acidine contains this wonderful scientific combination to relieve acid stomach trouble.

Don't risk dangerous results of acidity. Get Acidine from your druggist today. Watch pain, gas stop. Eat, drink and smoke. If troubled with acid try Acidine. Results guaranteed or money back. Get Acidine today.

Cities Service Company is one of the country's ten largest industrial organizations, serving millions of people in 33 states with electricity, transportation, ice, water, natural and manufactured gas, and petroleum products.

Cities Service is no newcomer in the petroleum business. One of its properties is one of the oldest—if not the oldest—in the oil industry. In 1862, shortly after the first oil well was drilled—the famous Drake Well in Titusville—this Cities Service subsidiary began refining and perfecting petroleum products.

Cities Service has a complete check on the quality of its products because it operates its own wells, pipelines, refineries and marketing systems.

The giant fleet of more than 4000 Cities Service motor vehicles serves as a practical proving ground in testing the quality of Cities Service petroleum products in actual service.

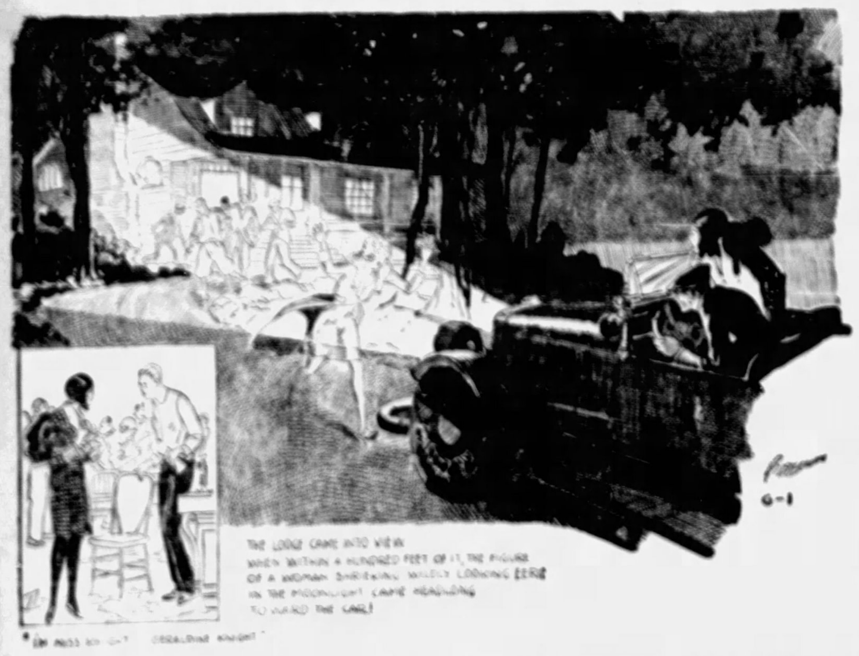
Master Mysteries

By ARTHUR HOERL

The Fatal Rendezvous



THE LODGE CAME INTO VIEW WHEN WITHIN A HUNDRED FEET OF IT, THE FIGURE OF A WOMAN SHRIEKING WILDLY LOOKING EERIE IN THE MOONLIGHT CAME HEADLONG TO WARD THE CAR!

CHAPTER I.

It was late on a Sunday afternoon. The city room of the Daily Journal was pervaded with an unusual calmness. The first edition, which was always on the streets by eight, had already been put out. Pop Beacon was on the desk. He lounged back in his rickety old chair and puffed contentedly on his pipe.

Jimmy, the general nuisance about the place, came in with early newspapers and distributed them among those present. It was Robin Dale's Sunday trick. Reilly and Erickson were also on the job. The only one of the staff showing any actual signs of activity was Jarry Chapple hunched over a typewriter, banging out his report on Broadway's weekly change of eye-and-ear entertainment.

Dale's primary interest was The Star. Monday was gossip day in the Darrell column and Dale wondered if the "personal" he had telephoned Bart Darrell that week was among those present.

There it was, big as life . . . James Milburn, up-and-coming young playwright . . . "The Jazz Cinderella," now going strong . . . going to for-better-or-worse-it with Geraldine . . . "The Jazz Cinderella," ditto . . . Knight . . .

Dale liked Jim Milburn immensely. Jim was one of the few with whom he ever got on terms of close comradeship. They had met at college and their friendship had lasted, on and off, because of Robin Dale's frequent perambulations and his otherwise irregular life, across a span of years.

This irregularity of the reporter's domestic life was the reason why he had not yet met Miss Knight. Milburn had telephoned him, early that week, so effervescently happy that he simply had to tell some one. Dale, after the congratulations, had said that he wanted to use the news. Milburn was that happy he would have agreed to anything.

Robin Dale was absorbing the rest of the gossip when the door into the city room opened and a lady stepped in. She looked about, with a moment's hesitation, and then hurried to Pop Beacon's desk.

"I'd like to speak with Mr. Dale—Robin Dale."

"That's Dale," said Beacon, pointing.

The lady went rapidly to the reporter's desk.

"Mr. Dale?" He looked up, surprised, and nodded. During this he rose and motioned to a chair. The lady sat down. He saw that she was agitated, although she was making a great effort to control herself.

"I'm Miss Knight—Geraldine Knight. Jim—Mr. Milburn—asked me to come to you. Something terrible has happened! Jack Sharon has been murdered!" Toward the end she spoke rapidly, unable longer to withhold the terrifying news.

Robin Dale remembered . . . Jim had spoken about going to Jack Sharon's place in the mountains for a week-end. He noted now that she wore a traveling coat and a hat fitted closely about her head. Her cheeks were ruddy, as though they had been whipped by the wind, a factor which only enhanced the fascinating spell of her beauty. Dale felt this as he gazed at her a moment before speaking.

"It appears to be serious—or you would not have driven into the city today."

"It is serious—frightfully serious. Jim wants you to come out at once. I'll explain everything as we go—there's not a moment to be lost. I feel terrible coming to you like this but Jim said you'd do it—for us."

"I'm sure it'll be all right, Miss Knight . . . it's really in the line of duty. I'll have to speak to the editor."

Pop Beacon made no objection to Robin Dale's self-appointed assignment. Whatever it was, those implicated were well known, and there was a story in it, probably an exclusive.

Geraldine Knight's car, a powerful-looking roadster, was at the curb. Downtown New York was deserted except for the thin stream of humanity going to and from the terminal. There was hardly a word spoken until they were beyond Van Cortlandt Park and on the road to Westchester. She evidently planned to cross the river above Bear Mountain.

Robin Dale, once outside New York, took the wheel.

"It'll be easier for you to explain . . . I'll watch the road so I won't be able to interrupt." But it was some time later before she made her explanation. Night had descended. The bright headlights swept over mile after mile of highway. Even at the rate of speed they were traveling it would be after 11 before they arrived at Jack Sharon's Catskill lodge.

"I'll start at the beginning," she said, shortly after they were on the open road. "You probably know about Jack Sharon's business—known as a financier, I think."

"Promoter . . . he and his partner, Kenneth Nash. They work close to the line—just escaped Atlanta once or twice. But, go on."

"It started before Nash became his partner. Sharon interested my father in one of his schemes. When the bubble burst, Dad found himself criminally liable for fraud and bankrupt. Sharon had all the money and none of the blame. Unable to face the disgrace Dad . . ." her voice went low, ". . . Dad committed suicide.

"You'll wonder, under the circumstances, why I am a guest at Sharon's lodge. That's the second angle in the affair. I have a younger brother. His one aim in life is to vindicate Dad. Under an assumed name—Arthur King—he's really Alan Knight, he is Jack Sharon's secretary. Sharon learned the truth and his invitation for this week-end contained a veiled threat of exposure.

"I didn't learn until this morning that Alan—and now that Sharon is dead no one but Jim and I know the truth of his identity—has been deliberately stealing from Sharon. He says he does not consider it wrong for he is only taking back what belongs to us. I'm afraid the law will not look at it that way. Sharon was sure of it.

"So, last night, he sent me a note to meet him at 11 in a little cabin across the lake from the lodge—you know, the lake is completely on his property. Somehow, the note disappeared. Searching for it I was late and got to the cabin at 11:30. Sharon was not there; in fact, I did not see him again until he was found this morning—dead!

"Shortly after I arrived at the cabin Jim arrived, carrying a shotgun. He was in a frantic state, and threatened to kill Sharon. He rushed out of the cabin to search for him.

"It was half an hour before I found Jim again. I finally made him return to the lodge and I noticed that he no longer had the shotgun. I learned then that Alan had mysteriously got possession of Sharon's note to me and explained everything to Jim.

"It was after midnight—we could not find Alan anywhere. I remembered that he had bought some shells in the afternoon for the purpose of going hunting early today, and I figured he had already set out.

"Finally we went to bed. Of course, I did not sleep. This morning they found Jack Sha on a quarter of a mile from the cabin on a sandy beach bordering the lake. He was lying face down in the sand and the police say he was killed with a shotgun held less than a foot from his face.

"The strange part of the entire affair is that there was no weapon near him and none has yet been found; and more uncanny still, the sand where he was found was untrodden. The only footprints were those of Jack Sharon leading to the spot where he was found dead. There was not a footprint of any kind left by the person who, the police insist, must have stood with one foot in front of Sharon when committing the crime.

"And worst of all—at the lodge is the haunting fear of death hanging over everyone . . . the murderer is still there!"

Not long afterwards Miss Knight pointed to a side road.

"That's the road, Mr. Dale."

Dale turned the car. The lodge came into view. When within a hundred feet of it the figure of a woman, shrieking wildly, looking eerie in the moonlight, came headlong toward the car!

FESS PREDICTS TARIFF AS ISSUE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(Universal.)—The tariff will supersede prohibition and farm relief as the dominant party issue in the congressional elections, in the opinion of Senator Simeon D. Fess, new Republican chairman.

Outlining his views on the approaching campaign, Fess said the G. O. P. had no fears of the Democratic assaults on the Smoot-Hawley bill, but were "glad to accept the issue."

Prohibition, in Fess' view, is an "economic and social" question rather than political. While conceding the problem will cut a large figure in the election results in many states, the new chairman does not believe it should be made a party issue.

On farm relief, Fess pointed to the Republican program of relief enacted by Congress and which is now just getting started under the Federal Farm Board. He considers the present business depression world-wide and that this country is affected less than others.

First Impressions

today business demands healthy men and women—and more than ever it is the survival of the fittest . . .

POOR health is a distinct drawback to progress in business or social life. Underweight, lack of appetite, sluggishness, a dull mentality, nervousness and even skin disorders—boils and pimples—show their mark on the body, face and mind when the red-cells are deficient in number. (See enlarged blood picture above.) Moreover a low red-blood-cell condition makes the system an easy prey to disease. When your red-blood-cells are only 80% you are NOT yourself—60% is dangerous.

The way to correct this condition is to take S.S.S.—the tonic that will help Nature build up and enrich your blood. Millions of people have found it the easiest and surest way to keep themselves "fit." If your vitality is slipping away from you, do try S.S.S. Take it before each meal. Get the large size. Gained Twenty Pounds in Six Months—Stomach Trouble and Nervousness Conquered.

No wonder Konjola is known as the new and different medicine with more than a million friends. No wonder seven million bottles of Konjola have been used in two years.

MR. JACK SCOLLICK

Konjola wins, time after time, when all else tried has proved a failure. But Konjola is not sold on promises; this modern medicine for the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels stands solely on its amazing record of success. Just see what Konjola did for Mr. Jack Scollick, 3624 California Avenue, Pittsburgh. Do you wonder why he is so enthusiastic about it? Then see the Konjola Man at the Dow Drug Store, Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, this city, and hear from him the remarkable story of this remarkable medicine. What, indeed, could be wiser than to profit by experiences like that of this young man?

Read what he says of Konjola and what it did for him, and fix in your mind that the files of Konjola fairly overflow with just such sincere endorsements. To the Konjola Man Mr. Scollick said:

"Stomach trouble and nervous indigestion caused me suffering for the past two years. Food produced gas, and I suffered terribly from stomach pains. I heard so many people talking about Konjola that I decided to put it to the test. I have taken eight bottles, and I am sleeping fine at night and my nerves are calm. I have gained twenty pounds in six months, and I want to say that I think Konjola is a wonderful medicine. It did for me all that was claimed for it, and I am happy to recommend it to anyone suffering from stomach trouble."

Now, isn't that the kind of medicine you want? One that goes right to the root of the ailment Konjola is designed to relieve. Konjola contains no alcohol, no nerve-deadening drugs, no heart-depressing chemicals. It is not designed for mere temporary relief.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow Drug Store, Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, this city, where daily he is meeting the public and explaining the merits of this new and different medicine. Konjola is sold at all Dow Drug Stores in Pittsburgh and vicinity.

STRIKERS JOBS FILLED HERE

George Hockinsmith, general superintendent for the Booth & Flinn Co., contractors, admitted today that 30 hoisting engineers had been pulled off four jobs by union officials, but stated the places of the strikers had been filled. The union claims that Booth & Flinn failed to carry out its agreement to employ none but union men on municipal work in Rochester, N. Y. Other jobs involved include work on the Gulf Building, the Ohio boulevard and the Westinghouse Bridge. Hockinsmith said:

"There were so many men waiting to take jobs, we were not inconvenienced five minutes by the strike."

SLEUTH'S SHOTS ROUT ROBBERS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—John Totten, a railroad detective, outshot three robbers in a pistol duel near the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad yards.

The detective escaped unhurt, but an hour after the shooting, Alfred Dickerson, 31, was found unconscious on the steps of a hospital with a bullet in his chest. He was identified later as one of those who had opened fire on the detective.

Totten said he was secreted near a cache where car robbers had hidden a quantity of plunder when three men drove up in an automobile. When he called upon them to halt they opened fire. Totten returned the shots and saw one of the men collapse. The others dragged him back into the car and sped away. Police said Dickerson's companions dropped him unannounced at the door of the hospital.

Hay Fever Yields to Doctor's Discovery

Indianapolis—What is regarded as an amazing advance in medical science is the discovery of the actual cause of Hay Fever and Asthma by the well-known Dr Fugate. He found the cause of these ailments originates from an unbalanced condition of the endocrine glands. After finding the cause he perfected an effective treatment that has already been used in thousands of cases, and the reports of immediate relief indicate that at last help for Hay Fever and Asthma has been found. An important booklet telling in detail about his discovery and treatment has been published by The Fugate Co., Dept. 6409, 126 S. Meridian St., Indianapolis, Ind., who offer to send it free. Those troubled with Hay Fever or Asthma should write at once.

GAILY DECKED TOWNS GREET FIREMEN

Taxi-Strike Feud Blamed for Drivers' Riot

Tented City For Firemen At Glendale

3 MEN HURT, 16 TAKEN TO JAIL

One Held at Hearing After Disturbance; Broken Nose Is Most Serious Injury

Ill feeling between taxicab drivers, those who returned to work before the signing of the agreement in their recent strike and those who did not, resulted in a riot near the Green Cab garage, in Melwood avenue, yesterday morning. Two squads of police from the Oakland station halted the battle.

Three men were taken to the Homeopathic Hospital and later with 13 others were taken to the Oakland Police Station where, at a hearing before Magistrate James O'Connor, only one was held.

Those injured in the melee, according to police, were Norbert Snyder, 30, of 102 Broadhead street; John Tait, 30, of 550 Ridgewood street, and Leroy Johnston, 27, of 1526 Madison avenue. The most serious injury, a broken nose, was suffered by Johnston.

Paul Regan, 22, of 435 Taylor street, was the one held over at the hearing.

CITY OF TENTS FOR FIREMEN FROM MANY TOWNS AND TOWNSHIPS IN SURROUNDING COUNTIES AT GLENDALE FOR ANNUAL VOLUNTEERS' CONVENTION

CONVENTION OPENS IN CARNEGIE

City of Tents at Glendale Houses Delegates; Week Replete with Features

Thousands of firemen were streaming into gaily bedecked Glendale and Carnegie today for the annual convention of the Western Pennsylvania Firemen's Association.

A tent city was erected yesterday on the outskirts of Glendale, arrayed in her holiday costume, for the quartering of many of the firemen.

Special church services were held in the district. This morning the convention was to be opened officially at the Carnegie Library Hall.

The week will be crowded with features, chief among them a street fair in the Washington avenue extension. Another, the nightly water battle, may be called off because of the shortage of water. Elections will be held Wednesday while Thursday will see the annual parade. The attraction scheduled for Friday is the mummers' parade. The convention ends Saturday.

The firemen come from 24 counties of Western Pennsylvania. Among towns already angling for next year's convention are Tarentum, Conneaut Lake and Meyersdale. The present head of the association is Andrew Rottler, of Connellsville. Paul N. Frank, of Glendale, is the convention chairman.

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

"Dear Mister:

"You perhaps know County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern—and his knack for getting into unusual situations. Well, after we finished the Nye senatorial inquiry at Washington Tuesday, McGovern, State Senator James J. Coyne, whom I don't know well enough to slap on the back and call 'Jimmy' yet; Attorneys Ralph H. Frank and Edward O. Spotts and myself ran down to Baltimore and stopped at one of those swell hotels where they have circulating ice water.

"When we went to breakfast the Senator and I, both early risers, were first in the dining room. The Senator was in his shirt sleeves, as was Spotts. I, as usual, had on my horse blanket suit with vest, which I wear on the old theory that what will keep the cold out will also keep out the heat.

"McGovern and Frank came in later, both in their shirt sleeves. The waiter hurried over to McGovern and said, 'You'll have to put your coat on over those suspenders.'

"Well for awhile you would have thought you were back home at a commissioners' meeting. McGovern and Frank walked out. They ate across the street at one of those places where the chairs are built for one-armed men and a smile and a nickel will get you a cuppa cawfee.

"Please don't leave off that fourth initial this time.

"E. P. O'B."

We feel it a duty to warn the customers of a new booze racket which has been successful here and there. The perpetrator, a suave, shrewd fellow, chooses as victims a few friends of somebody who has recently died, John Jones, for example. The racketeer introduces himself to these friends and explains that it was too bad about Jones, especially since he had just returned from the Bahamas with a dozen cases of fine liqueurs which his late friend had ordered. The upshot is that the friends decide to take over the liquor and, after making the necessary expensive payments, find themselves the owners of a choice lot of around-the-corner moonshine, done up in fancy bottles and fancier labels.

The courthouse does more or less of a 24-hour-a-day business. In the light hours official business is conducted; at night, law students take possession of the old building. They hold there mute trials and, as they should, the students generally go about their work seriously. On the bench usually is a young lawyer, a few years out of school himself. After a day in court, during which he has perhaps been rebuked by a judge, he enjoys the dignified safety of the bench himself, even if it doesn't mean anything.

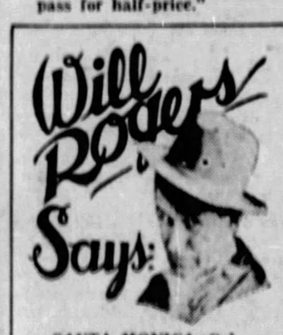
One of the town's best story tellers is John Francies, the county treasurer, who, we dare say, knows more stories than any county treasurer in Allegheny County's history. There are stories told about him, too—as, for example, the time he mistakenly dropped the $5 gold piece into the telephone coin box. After he had given the operator his number, Mr. Francies, a Scot, realized his error and tried with frantic futility to recall the operator. Fortunately, the line was busy and the precious coin came jangling back.

Mr. Francies plays on his Scotch ancestry for laughs. Once, taken unexpectedly ill on a Tuesday, he telephoned his friend Jimmy McKay and said:

"Jimmy, I'm sick and it looks like I won't be able to get out the rest o' the week. I'll sell you my street car pass for half-price."



SANTA MONICA, Cal., Aug. 11.

I see where one of the young boy tree sitters has just passed his 500 hours sitting in a tree top. There is a good deal of discussion as to what to do with a civilization that produces prodigies like that. Why wouldn't it be a good idea to take their ladder away from 'em and leave 'em up there.

Pretty near all of us out here in California during these hard times are selling our homes, and they tear 'em down and put in these premature golf courses. You can't sell for much, but they give you a free ticket to play. The jails are putting 'em in now to get prisoners' minds off mutiny.

Yours,
WILL.

PARLEY ON 'RIB' COAL HELD

Representatives of Mt. Lebanon Township and the Pittsburgh Coal Company met today to discuss various phases of the "rib" coal controversy.

The price at which the coal company is willing to sell the underlying coal, which it had started to remove, was likely to be the chief topic of discussion. The conference started at 10 o'clock.

The result of today's conference will be presented to the township commissioners at their regular meeting to be held at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the Mt. Lebenon Municipal Building.

At the conference Township Engineer W. P. Vegeler, George J. Irwin, township manager, and E. B. Goldsmith, township solicitor, are representing Mt. Lebanon, and Attorney John B. Eichenauer, the coal company.

Police Lieutenant Honored with Party

Lieut. of Police Philip J. Kumpf, appointed last month, was given a congratulatory party Saturday night in the Squirrel Hill Police Station and presented with a wrist watch by fellow officers and friends of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth wards. Magistrate Leo Rothenberg made the presentation speech.

Man Robbed While Sleeping on Porch

Taking advantage of the Sabbath rest, Donald Lighthill, of 339 Meyran avenue, went to sleep on the front porch of his home yesterday. An hour later he discovered thieves had looted his clothing, taking $87 in cash and a check for $15.

Fire Destroys Auto In Fineview Street

The automobile of Anthony Mackielli, of Finleyville, was destroyed by fire early today in Fineview street, North Side. Backfire was blamed for starting the blaze.

HUSBAND SHOT AS PROWLER

Answering a call from Mrs. Mannie McCoy, 32, Negro, of 514 Lowell street, who said a prowler was in her back yard, police from the East End station detected a man fleeing from the rear of the house.

Motorcycle Patrolmen Joseph O'Donnell and J. W. Thompson gave chase and fired shots in the air. The man refused to halt and Thompson then shot him in the hip.

At the Pittsburgh Hospital the victim said he was Thomas McCoy, Negro, 32, husband of the woman who had complained. He refused to state why he was acting suspiciously in the back yard.

3 BOYS HELD IN BURGLARY

Three boys, caught, police say, in the act of looting the home of Louis Karcis, at 4747 Second avenue, were in the custody of the Juvenile Court today. The boys, all over 12, said they know nothing of the $100 worth of clothing and other articles missing from the house.

Police were of the belief that the boys had carried the loot out and had made their second trip to the house when they were captured. Because of their youth, the Sun-Telegraph will not publish their names.

Purchasing Agents Plan for Meeting

R. W. Mackenson, purchasing agent of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, has been named chairman of the committee to make arrangements for the sixth district convention of the National Association of Purchasing Agents to be held here October 16 and 17. Representatives of more than 1,000 companies in Western Pennsylvania and Ohio will be present.

Annual Outing For Ladies' Aid

The Ladies Aid Society of Mt. Olivet Lutheran Church, Spring Hill, will hold their annual outing Wednesday at Bear Pit, Riverview Park.

MISS HARD-BOILED

by JANE DIXON

Raquel Thrilled at Sight Of Ocean Liner

CHAPTER XXIII.

Raquel, bounding from bed like a brook that has burst its icy bonds of winter and is off, with a song, to join its Mother Ocean.

On this day she was starting for Paris. In a ship. As big as the biggest building. As big as the gray stone pile of the Bosarts on Park avenue. Gliding across the ocean to strange lands in an enchanted palace.

She gazed ruefully at the desk with its scattered sheets of paper. If she only knew what to tell Farrell!

"It's got to be done," she prodded herself. "I must get to the shop as soon as I can. Might as well do it now. While I'm happy and in the mood."

She sat down at the desk. In a moment she was scratching away busily. If she stopped to think, she'd never finish. Just put down the first thing that came into her head:

"Amigo: Do not blame me. I do not want to marry. Not now. Here in New York I have found Beauty. Such beauty as I did not know could be. It has taken possession of me. I go today to Paris, France, as a model to wear beautiful clothes. I am paid well and it is safe. Of this you need not worry. I leave for you $200, the first money I have earned. The other I will send to you at this hotel.

"I do not know how long I shall be gone—two, three months, maybe longer. If you should care to wait, perhaps, when I come back, it will be different. Mil gracias, amigo mio. Raquita."

Leaves Letter

Hotel Clerk Trusted With Note for Farrell

She did not stop to read what she had written. It would be useless. Whatever she wrote would sound harsh, inadequate, hard. She folded two $100 bills in the paper and sealed them into an envelope that she addressed to Farrell.

"My bill?" she asked the clerk at the desk. It was twice as large, she noticed, as it had been the first week of her stay here. Indulgence is such an easy habit.

She made sure the manager was nowhere in sight.

"I am expecting a Mr. Farrell," she told the clerk brightly. "If he should come while I'm out please hand him this note. Perhaps you had better put it in the safe. It is important."

"With pleasure, Miss Roejoes."

She skipped out of the hotel. Imitation palms in the lobby. Scuffed carpets. Soiled white curtains. Had she really thought this was grandeur?

Trip Begins

Raquel and Alphonse Start for Paris

All day in the shop she served as a model. Gowns, hats, wraps. Laces, ribbons, feathers, flowers. Fine raiment swept over her in waves. Purled around her for a moment, passed on.

The last-minute rush. Alphonse must leave his shop in running trim. He shouted orders. He paced. He swooped and tossed and swore a little in a French patois strongly flavored with Americanisms.

Lunch from a chair in a showroom. Dinner from Alphonse's desk. Clocks with hands that crawled, or seemed to stop completely.

"It is finished!" Alphonse glanced at the watch on his wrist. Ran long supple fingers through iron-gray hair wildly awry. "Come, Mademoiselle Raquel. A sport frock. The gray one there. The coat with the blue fox. A hat, Miss Emily. Mon Dieu! No, no, no. Why do you pick one the color of dust? That dove-gray—ah, perfect."

"Yes, you, Emily," Raquel was scolding mentally as she slipped the frock over her head. "Why do you choose dust for me? Don't you know I am through with dust? I brush away the dust as if it had never been. I go to Paris."

Down Fifth avenue in the black town car. Across mean, dimly lighted streets. Great broad barns that squatted on the river's edge. A tangle of cars, of people milling, of trucks groaning. A moving platform with trunks and bags on it, carrying them up toward the top of the barn.

"This way, Mademoiselle Raquel." Into an elevator. Clinging to Alphonse. Out under the roof of the great barn. Is that great white building beside the

MAN, 71, FOUND ROBBED

Beaten and robbed, William Hoffman, 71, of 863 Stella street, was found semi-conscious early today in a rest room near the Fifth avenue entrance of the court house. At Mercy Hospital, it was said he was suffering from a probable fracture of the skull.

He recovered consciousness sufficiently to tell police he had been attacked and robbed of a small sum. The homicide squad is prepared to question him, if his condition permits.

2 HOMESTEAD MEN SHOT

Joseph Selesti, 39, and Frank Garlio, 30, roomers at 308 Dixon street, Homestead, are in Homestead Hospital as a result of a shooting in the rooming house early today.

Police are holding Lucas Corres, 24, another roomer, as the trouble maker. Selesti was wounded in the right hip and Garlio in the legs. Several other roomers are being held as witnesses.

Crafton Man Held On Larceny Charge

Leon Preston, 29, 32 Arnold avenue, Crafton, was held for court on a larceny charge today by Magistrate Ray E. Schneider in North Side Police Court. Patrolman George Sibbitt testified Preston crashed his auto against the doors of an Eloise street garage to gain entrance and had stolen goods in the auto.

Brother Identifies Drowning Victim

Henry Buffa, living in a railroad camp in McKees Rocks, last night identified the body of the man found floating in the Allegheny River at the foot of Fifteenth street, as that of his brother, Stephen Buffa, 40, of 1103 Wylie avenue, morgue attaches reported.

Madison Ave. Man Robbed by Gang of 5

Overpowered by five men whom he passed at the Penn avenue end of the Sixteenth Street Bridge, William Murphy, of 512 Madison avenue, was thrown to the sidewalk and robbed of $26 and a watch valued at $45 early today, police report.

PERCHERS, BIKE RIDERS GO ON

The perchers and pedalers today were continuing on their way to endurance records in the East End and Morningside districts.

Robert, James and Lawrence Gravely and their cousin, Samuel King, sitting in trees in the rear of 631 Sickles street, were completing their six hundred and forty-fourth hour in the air.

The bicycle riders, pedaling in four-hour shifts, were in their sixth day of continuous riding in the neighborhood of Highview street and Stanton avenue. The boys are Albert Slutzky, 13, of 5435 Stanton avenue; Danny Auslander, 13, of 817 Highview street, and Irwin Pittler, 12, of 1021 Jancey street. They are determined to keep going until September.

Foreman Attacked, Police Seek 2 Men

Police are seeking two men who early today attacked Jack Richards, of 219 Elder street, Oak Hill, near his home. Richards, a foreman for a contracting firm engaged upon the construction of the new George Westinghouse bridge, was returning home from work when he was attacked, he told East Pittsburgh police. He sustained lacerations of the face, according to a police report.

Man Hurt, Police Open Investigation

Homestead police today are seeking to learn how George Bender, of Margaretta street, was injured last night. The man was found unconscious along the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad near Amity street. He was removed to the Homestead Hospital where he recovered consciousness this morning. He suffered an injury to the head.

Arm Breaks Glass, Man Cut Seriously

Slipping on the running board of his automobile at Kelly street and Lang avenue early today, J. O. Kane, 23, of 725 Oakwood street, plunged his left arm through the windshield and was injured seriously. The glass pierced an artery and he lost a considerable amount of blood before reaching the Pittsburgh Hospital.

BABY CONTEST TALK OF CITY

The recently announced search for Pittsburgh's most beautiful babies has already become the popular topic for discussion in many of the homes throughout the city—particularly the homes where there are children.

This new beauty quest is being conducted by the Sun-Telegraph in conjunction with the Kroger Stores and the contest will be staged at the annual picnic of the Kroger Stores at Kennywood Park Thursday, August 21.

There will be classes for boys and girls, and silver cups for the three winners in each class. One class will be for infants, one year of age and under. There will be another class for children from one to three years of age, and still another for children from three to five years of age.

And the twins and the triplets will not be overlooked.

Officer Aiding Cat Rescue Loses Part of Finger

Patrolman Allan Purucker today wished he could find the mean one who put a homeless cat and four kittens in a sewer at Batca and Semple streets.

Patrolman Purucker lost part of the second finger of his left hand in rescuing the felines with the aid of two brother officers. Purucker's finger was pinched when he and Patrolman Harry Abromowitz and Acting Lieut. Morgan O'Brien lifted the sewer lid. But this didn't halt the rescue. Abromowitz got down into the sewer and brought up the cat and the four kittens.

At first O'Brien believed the cat and the kittens belonged to David Yee, a nearby laundry man. He was mistaken. Yee's cat and kittens were at home, but his offer to keep the rescued cats pleased the police. Purucker was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital, where partial amputation of the finger was found necessary.

Dog Makes Escape After Attacking Policeman

Police in the East End district today were searching for a large police dog which bit Patrolman William J. Dacy on the left leg while he was patroling his beat at South Winebiddle and Friendship avenues yesterday. The animal escaped before the patrolman could shoot it. Dacy's wound was cauterized at the West Penn Hospital.

Speed in Hospital Dash Gets Driver Arrested

Anthony Sobers, 22, of 13 Diamond square, will be arraigned in Traffic Court on a reckless driving charge because, police say, he sped his automobile without lights through South Side streets early yesterday, while taking an injured friend to the South Side Hospital.

Wagonman August Becker fired at the car when Sobers ignored the wagonman's command to halt. Becker was unaware Sobers was en route to a hospital.

The traffic rules were violated because of the injury of Stephen Pamicki, 36, who lives at the same address as Sobers. Pamicki suffered lacerations of a foot which went through the glass of a china closet when he slipped in the home of a neighbor, Sobers said.

1930 AUTO TOLL HERE MOUNTS TO 112

JULY DEATHS BY TRAFFIC REACH 19

Rise in Fatalities Laid To 'Tag Fixing;' Fatalities Near Last Year's Total

With 19 dead in traffic accidents in July, street fatalities in Pittsburgh this year have amounted to 112, according to a report by Coroner W. J. McGregor. This is an increase of 30 over last year.

Deaths this year include 15 children and 97 adults, compared with 23 children and 97 adults during the whole of last year. Three of the 21 drivers involved were women. Ten of the drivers were alleged to be violating traffic laws.

According to Frank L. Duggan, chairman of the Better Traffic Committee, the rise in fatalities during July seems to bear out the contention that there is some correlation between the mounting death toll and the conditions pointed out in the committee's resolution some time ago regarding "tag fixing." That resolution, which was presented to City Council, asserts that tag fixing is undermining obedience to traffic laws and is largely responsible for the increases in traffic accidents and fatalities.

ERK, CHAIRMAN IN CONFERENCE

Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, as Republican county chairman, said today he was ready to call a meeting of committeemen in the Thirty-second Congressional district, to nominate a successor to the late Congressman Stephen G. Porter, as soon as the desire for such a meeting is evinced.

Porter's successor for the unexpired term will be chosen at the November election.

MARSH SCORES EXCESS TAXES

Unemployment insurance and excess taxes, with possible remedies, were the subjects of a speech by Benjamin C. Marsh at a meeting of the Henry George Club in the Chamber of Commerce today.

Charging that the public paid at least four billion dollars a year to land owners, nearly an equal amount to the "great combines which own the government and utilize their power to fleece the public," Marsh called on Senator Reed to use his influence to combat the "beneficiaries from the system."

Mr. Marsh pointed out that the purchasing power of the public is far below the value of the commodities annually manufactured by it. He charged that the excess taxes paid by America's producers alone is nearly twice the value of the commodities exported.

Marsh said:

"The governor of Pennsylvania should promptly call the Legislature in special session to devise a system of unemployment insurance with federal support."

The Camera Question Box

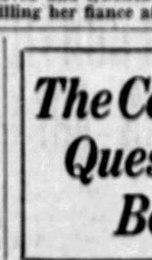
Today's question — In the opinion of a leading educator who spoke at a fraternity meeting at Columbia University, a young man who is bitten by the Ph. D. bug is as good as ruined for all practical purposes. Do you agree with him?

R. B. Hagar

R. B. Hagar, supervisor of schools, Charleroi—He's ruined for practical purposes until he has attained the degree for which he is aiming. Too many good men have their Ph. D. degree to make such a broad statement as that.

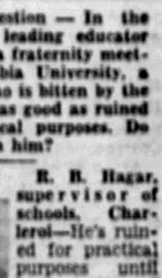
Mrs. Evans, Jr.

Mrs. P. T. Evans, Jr., stenographer, Avalon—I don't agree with him. After a man has his degree he is more prepared to be of use to the world than he has ever been before.



Fred K. Barclay

FRED K. BARCLAY, Teacher, Homestead—There are things to be said on both sides of that question. Some of the most eminent men in the country today have Ph. D. degrees, but there are also some who have them who are most impractical.

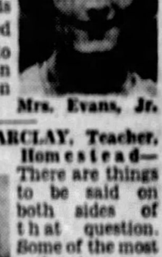


Harry E. Pebly

HARRY E. PEBLY, School superintendent, Sharpsville — I don't agree. The strenuous work required to get the degree would mean that the man had a serious purpose and would, therefore, be of some value.

Miss Kessler

MISS EVELYN KESSLER, housekeeper, Oakland — I think that the man who, after getting a college education, wants to get more degrees, is certainly not ruined for practical purposes. The ambition to go further is enough to reverse that statement.



W. H. Church

W. H. CHURCH, school principal, McKees Rocks—A Ph. D. degree does frequently make a man impractical and eccentric. Besides that he gets the wrong slant on things.

GUNMAN ROBS FIFTH STORE

A hatless, coatless robber, believed the same one who held up four East End chain stores Friday, entered the P. H. Butler store, 6100 St. Marie street, today, and ordered cigarets.

As Manager P. J. Gracey turned to get them, the robber pulled a gun and compelled him and Miss Sarah Boyce, 22, of 4901 Breesport street, a clerk, to put up their hands.

The holdup man took $4 from the cash register, saying:

"I am an honest man and expect to return this money."

He escaped in an automobile.

He was described as about 45, with grayish hair, and of medium height.

DRUG IMPORTS MAY BE CUT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(INS.)—Further reductions in the legal import of narcotics may be ordered by the Public Health Service, which under the Porter bill has authority to regulate amounts which may be shipped into the United States from abroad, it was learned today.

Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming and Assistant Surgeon General W. L. Treadway will hold a conference Tuesday with manufacturers of narcotic drugs and representatives of scientific organizations to discuss the import limitations.

Several narcotic rings, of international scope, have been broken up recently by the new bureau and investigations are aimed at other big operatives.

Baby Golf Million Dollar Industry; 25,000 Links

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—These baby golf courses sprouting around the United States now number 25,000, and represent the incredible value of $125,000,000 in investment.

This is the estimate compiled by the Commerce Department, which finds that 15,000 of them have sprung into existence since last January, and that their total is still on the rise.

Primarily the government's commercial sharps have been investigating the subject by reason of the demand the miniature golf establishments are creating for materials of various kinds.

The courses are consuming, in the aggregate, very respectable quantities of cotton, through their use of duck and canvas for enclosures. They use also the products of a dozen industries, and if they exhibit drawing power through winter weather, will require shelter and heat for the crowding players.

START FOURTH WEEK IN AIR

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Fifteen thousand aviation fans visited Lambert-St. Louis Field today to watch Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, now nearing a new record for endurance refueling flying. At 9:11 a. m., Pittsburgh time, Jackson and O'Brine entered their fourth week in the air in their effort to better the 554-hour record of the Hunter brothers of Chicago.

At that time Jackson and O'Brine had been in the air 492 hours, and were within 62 hours of the Hunters' record.

Experts said they had been unable to detect any lessening of the plane's endurance power, although Jackson radioed down today that the oil pressure was a little low and the pilots changed to heavier oil. Except for the pressure, Jackson said the plane was "doing fine."

After sweltering for days, the pilots today complained of the cold weather. Jackson also complained that he was sleepy.

Early yesterday the fliers descended to a low altitude to ride out a mild rainstorm. The pilots apparently chose to fly low rather than labor the plane's motor by going above the storm.

BANK BOMBER'S NOTE FOUND

FORT WORTH, Tex., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Nathan M. Martin, 30, who caused his own and another's death by exploding a vial of nitroglycerin in the Stockyards National Bank during an attempted robbery, died apparently leaving a detailed motive for his desperate act a secret.

Police found Martin's parked automobile. The bomber's bank book and a note to his widow were inside.

The note read:

"Honey:

"Forgive me for all I have ever done as I am in a position where I can stand it no longer.

"Here is all the money I have."

Inside the bank book was $4.25. The book showed a balance of $157.

Entering the bank yesterday, Martin walked to the desk of W. L. Pier, the president, said he was desperate, was carrying a vial of nitroglycerin, and would blow up the institution unless he received $10,000.

Pier signaled. Two policemen hurriedly entered. Martin hurled the vial to the floor.

Barone said that during his trip from Rio de Janeiro, three mechanics who had accompanied him had died.

When asked how the roads which he had traveled on his way through Central and South America compared with the roads of Pennsylvania, he replied:

"They have no such roads, no such mileage. But road improvements are being planned and American road-making machinery and American road construction will figure largely in the improvements that are to come."

Barone is the author of a book based on his experiences through the Americas.

Denies Ex-Kaiser Chops; Says He Tosses Sticks

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Contrary to report, former Kaiser Wilhelm does not wield the ax over his Doorn woodpile, but his aim with the splintered sticks is unerring, said T. St. John Gaffney, of Summit, N. J., once of the consular service, who returned on the liner Stuttgart from a visit to his friend of 25 years' standing. Gaffney said:

"The reports that the former Kaiser chops wood are exaggerations. He is able to wield an ax only with his right hand. However, what the Kaiser does do is take the pieces of wood in his right hand and toss them with unerring accuracy into the barn loft."

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Hyannisport Increasing In Popularity With Pittsburgh Folks

Watch Hill is not the only resort having a large Pittsburgh colony during the summer months. Hyannisport, Mass., is a most attractive rival. Many of our folks go there each summer, where they have cottages.

The Samuel Hartwells are there with their children, Eleanor and Carolyn Hartwell, and are the guests of Mrs. George W. J. Bissell. They were recently the guests of the W. L. Mellons on the Vagabondia, as were the Thomas Hitchcocks. Of course you remember that Mrs. Hitchcock was formerly Margaret Mellon.

Bernard S. Horne, Jr., will arrive in Hyannisport the middle of this week where Mrs. Horne has been for the summer with her father and mother, the Stephen Sheldons, of St. Louis, Mo.

Scullys Guests

The Reese Scullys are in Hyannisport, too, the guests of the Frank Adair Leovys and their daughter Helen, who's president of the Pittsburgh Junior League.

The John Jackson Bissells are expected there today, to be the guests of Mr Bissell's mother, Mrs. George W. J. Bissell.

The Herbert A Gidneys are at The Gables Inn for August with their two daughters, Betty and Priscilla Gidney, and the summer colony also includes the G. Harton Singers and their children, G Harton Singer, Jr., and Peggy Ann.

W. Y. Humphreys has as his summer guests his son-in-law and daughter, the Paul Dickeys, and his son and daughter-in-law, the Alan S. Humphreys.

The William H. Kuhns have been at Hyannisport for the past fortnight, and others at the resort include Mrs. Thomas Orr, who's the guest of Mrs. J. F. Walton, and Mrs. Robert Totten, who's the guest of Mrs. James Laughlin.

The W. A. Galbraiths are to arrive tomorrow, and the C. Bernard Sheas have returned home after being the guest of Mr. Shea's mother, Mrs. J. B. Shea, of Amberson avenue, at her Hyannisport place.

If this delightfully chilly weather continues long enough, there'll be some social entertainments right here at home to rival the many colorful events at Newport, at Watch Hill, at Saratoga Springs. But just now, when folks are still skeptical of August's sudden change in mood, most of our news is still about summer resort folks.

Mesta Tea

Yesterday Mrs. George Mesta, of Washington, formerly of Pittsburgh, entertained at the Rocks, her Newport place, which overlooks Baileys Beach, with a tea for the commandants of the naval and military cantonments in the vicinity of the exclusive summer resort.

And before we leave Newport, I want to mention that Miss Lillian Washburn Newlin will entertain with a dinner on August 22 in her villa in honor of her house guest, Mrs. Henry C. Derham, of New York.

Travel Notes

Mrs. Henry R. Rea, of "Farm Hill," Sewickley, and her son-in-law and daughter, the junior George Andrew Benneys, who are now in Paris, plan to attend the famous annual horse show at Dublin.

The junior Joseph W. Rays have sailed for Halifax, from where they will leave for Europe.

Mrs. Eleanor Scott Walker, who's been the guest of her son, Hepburn Walker, Jr., at Camp Keewaydin, Vt., is now in Southport, Conn., the house guest of the Burgoyne Hamiltons, of New York.

After being the guest of his father and mother, the Charles F. Pattersons, of Sewickley Heights, Charles Lord Patterson has returned to the East.

Forsyth Patterson, his sister, has gone to Beal, N. J., for the remainder of August.

The junior Lawrence C. Woods are in Bay Head, N. J., the guests of Mr. Woods' mother, Mrs. Lawrence Crane Woods.

Review at Mt. Lebanon To Open Season on October 1

Wednesday, October 1, has been set as the opening day for the Woman's Fortnightly Review of Mt. Lebanon. The opening will be entirely a "family affair," with something very unique for entertainment.

Mrs. B. T. Charters, Fortnightly's new president, and her family left Saturday by motor for Chautauqua where they will spend the remainder of the month. Mrs. John McKelvie, the new social chairman, her husband and daughter are home from Eglesmere, and Mrs. James McKelvie, her husband, together with Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Cooley, are at Maple Springs, Chautauqua Lake. Mrs. James S. Huey, another member, and Mr. Huey are touring Canada, and Mrs. J. W. Davis and her husband are making a boat and motor tour of the Dominion. Mrs. S. A. Schreiner and Mrs. E. G. Hays and their families spent July at Chautauqua. Mrs. W. E. McKnight, a former president, is home after a 10-day lake trip.

Mrs. Ralph S. Davis, editor of the Congress of Clubs "Outlet," devotes her editorial space this month to discussion of what the various departments of the Congress have to offer the members. Such subjects as "Family Budgets," "Some Weaknesses in American Home Life" and "Is the American Home Deteriorating?" are to be taken up by the home department. Mrs. Davis foretells. Training for citizenship and active interest for the ex-service man are laid out as activities of the welfare department; intellectual commerce is promised through the educational group, and sympathy and understanding through the apprenticeship of amateur writing in the department of literature.

Outlet Issued

Mrs. Davis also comments on the restfulness and repose of Congress House during these warm days. More annual reports are printed in the current issue and the president's monthly message dwells on the beckoning welcome of the clubhouse.

ELABORATE BEACH ENSEMBLES DECORATE FASHION RESORTS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, AUG. 11.—You don't necessarily have to plunge into the ocean to be in the swim this year. If you don a striking beach ensemble you may be accepted as a mermaid de luxe, and as much homage will be accorded you as if you had negotiated the English Channel under your own power, original are beach outfits that who ever manage to evolve the most startling and elaborate outfit at any fashionable resort, is surely entitled to all the admiration she can get. On the other hand the very simple one-piece suit of exquisite cut is outstandingly chic. We do not know whether the highly decorative and elaborate beach costumes are being worn on your side of the ocean also, but somehow we cannot imagine an athletic Americaine quite content to spend her vacation all dressed up in a lovely beach outfit, just sitting on the beach and gazing at the ocean. As a matter of fact the athletic girls here don't either.

So strikingly some of the this year, does

WE WILL ASSUME that our readers are more interested in seeing elaborate beach ensembles than in wearing them, and so we have had sketched for them one of the most striking creations of that kind shown this season. It is by Mirande and was seen at the Concours d'Elegance au Gala Nautical organized by l'Intransigeant. The wrap around skirt is entirely pleated in soleil or sun-ray fashion and is worn over a bathing suit of rose milanese cut very low in the back. The girdle and the large circular pieces falling from the hat to protect the shoulders are of china blue silk.

The bathing ENSEMBLE also sketched at the Concours d'Elegance is from Alex nd is of jade green with a striking white rsey applique. The circular skirt can be also used as a cape, a most useful notion beside the ocean.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 11.—Former Judge William E. Porter died suddenly Saturday night at Omaha, Neb., en route home with his wife from a motor trip to Yellowstone Park. He died an hour after being stricken with a heart attack.

Judge Porter was one of the outstanding Democrats of the state. Elected as judge of Lawrence County in 1904, he achieved statewide and national prominence in 1911, when he refused all liquor licenses, making Lawrence County the first dry county of the state. In 1926, he unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination for governor, entering the contest as a dry.

He was a Mason and a member of the United Presbyterian Church. He leaves his widow, one daughter, Mrs. Edwin Mackey, three sisters, Mrs. Nanie Rankin, of Sharon; Mrs. John Rust, and Mrs. Frank Hoagland, of Mercer County, and two brothers, Joseph and Melvin Porter, of Mercer County.

Speeches in the different languages of the missionaries were delivered at important corners, alternating with serenades by brass bands, and were translated into German.

Most Protestant churches held special services for the visitors, and these were followed by open-air meetings in public squares.

At a thanksgiving service in the convention hall, Pastor Ira Landrith, of Chicago, called up the delegates of 31 different nationalities to pledge themselves again to devote their lives to the cause of religion.

An old timers' night on Tuesday, a children's parade sponsored by Franklin Elks on Wednesday, and a military parade Thursday, with Northwestern Pennsylvania National Guard companies and veterans' organizations taking part, are among the high lights of the week. Powder Won't Hide Disgusting Pores

There's no use trying to hide large pores, blackheads and oily skin behind makeup. You only fool yourself.

Out in Hollywood they have the recipe for a lotion that quickly removes flaws and makes the skin beautiful and soft. Get 3 ounces of Orchard White from the druggist and mix it with the juice of 2 lemons. You have a full quarter-pint of the finest lotion.

The very minute you pat this cooling, reviving lotion on the face it gets down deep into the skin and cleans out the dirt that settles in large pores. It removes blackheads, closes the pores and quickly makes the skin smooth, good-looking and youthfully fresh.

You'll notice, too, that the skin is no longer oily and perspiration doesn't bother you any more.

Now if you want a smooth, soft, beautiful skin—just get 3 ounces of Orchard White from any druggist, mix it with the juice of 2 lemons and you have the new Hollywood beauty lotion.

Note: In the summer this lotion keeps the skin free from freckles and guards against that leathery look caused by wind and sun.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Should a Poor Family Adopt a Baby?

Ethel and Al want a baby—

But they "can't give it anything but love."

Maybe if it were going to be their own baby, they wouldn't worry and wonder. Parents take chances like that. But this will have to be a borrowed baby, so they're doing a lot of thinking—which regular mothers and dads don't usually do. And they can't decide—

Is it fair to take a baby if you can't give it "advantages?"

All the friends and relations say it isn't.

But after all, what are "advantages?" Are they fine clothes and beautiful houses and college careers? Or is the greatest "advantage" on earth, plain, old-fashioned love? Love that will suffer and sacrifice with a glad and willing heart for the helpless little tad that shares its poverty?

Ethel will do that—and how! But is that enough? Or must parents be rated in Dun and Bradstreet before they can get that way?

Listen in. Then say your piece—

WANTS TO ADOPT BABY

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I have a problem that no one seems to agree with me about. Not even my husband. And I've been talked at so much about it that I'm beginning to wonder if maybe it isn't just selfishness on my part.

"Do you think it would be right for us to adopt a baby when we have nothing but love to give it? I want one so badly. You just don't know how badly! But our income is small. We manage to live within it. Our house is also small, but not one to be ashamed of. We have a small car, and no debts to worry over.

"Even my husband thinks we should wait until we have enough money saved up to give it everything before we take one. But I think we should get one now, and that doing so, would make the goal more worth while.

"We come, ourselves, of humble parentage, and it seems to me that money is not more worth while than love and a happy home environment. There isn't money enough in the world to exchange for my own happy memories of home and the love there was in it.

"My husband and I haven't set the world on fire when it comes to making money, but we haven't given up hopes of having some some day, and we can still laugh with the world. Just think how much happier that laugh could be if we could feel the touch of those baby fingers!

WOULD MAKE SACRIFICES

"We would have a lot of sacrifices to make, but we'd have those anyway, if the baby was of our own flesh and bone. That only helps to make things more worth while. Don't you think so?

"But all my friends and relatives seem to think I'd be imposing on a baby to take it when we have so little. Some folks tell me that what is to be will be, but if those who didn't want babies didn't have them, there wouldn't be so many of these poor little orphan babies. So I can't quite go that thought.

"I'd love it if somebody left a baby on my doorstep . . . and I hope it would be a girl. It would be such fun to sew for her. Almost like playing dolls again!

"I'd like to know what you think of my idea of taking a baby. And I'd like to hear what others think of it. Would I be doing wrong by it, to take it into a poor home, do you think? And should we wait, till we could give it more advantages? Ethel."

DEPENDS ON HER

Should you wait? Well, Ethel, I suspect that depends on you. Personally, if I wanted a baby, I'd have one, even if I didn't own a doggone thing but a busted shoe string and a dog biscuit. For with a baby to fight for, I'd take my chances against anything Fate could stack up. But I don't advise any one to follow my trail unless they're built on gambling lines. However, history's full of babies that made a wonderful record even if they did start from the scratch.

Abraham Lincoln, for instance. I don't suppose a youngster ever had less advantages than Lanky Abe—but wasn't that, perhaps, the very secret of his success? Would he have had as much shrewdness and wallop and everlasting goodness in' guts if he'd been fed with a gold spoon? I doubt it.

But I admit there are others who think that babies are bad business unless the budget's ready. So here's their chance to strut their stuff.

What price babies?

Suppose you were going to have one—

Or be one—

How much would you want to have handy in the good old wallet?

Would you wait until the bank roll bulged—

Or would you take a chance on love?

Cultivate Charm While Waiting for Your Prince, Fay King's Advice

DIGNITY AND CHARM ARE THE PROPER IMPRESSION TO MAKE!
EVERY GIRL DREAMS OF AN IDEAL ROMANCE AND MARRIAGE
FAY-ING
A REPUTATION FOR WILDNESS DOES NOT IMPRESS THE RIGHT MAN

By FAY KING

Every girl is a potential Cinderella who may meet her prince, and live happily in the castles she has builded in her dreams.

But a wise Cinderella prepares herself so that when he does meet her prince she can properly impress him.

Beauty may attract him, but she must have charm and dignity, nice manners and intelligence before he will seriously consider her as the head of his home.

Many really nice girls do themselves the grave injustice of seeming wild and wayward. This will get them nothing but invitations to wild parties.

Happy wives you meet have a quiet, reposeful, charming manner. Husbands prefer them that way.

A wife is the light of her home. Not the life of wild parties!

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Loves Awakening

Harry Conquers His Jealousy

Harry Underwood made no movement toward Robert Savarin's letter, which I was holding out to him for the second time.

"I don't think I ought to read even a paragraph of the poor devil's letter," he reiterated reluctantly.

"Do you think I would ask you to do it if I were not sure, not only that it is necessary, but that Robert himself would not object to your reading this particular passage? Indeed, I am not sure that he did not have a secret wish that you might read it," I added.

He shot a quick glance at me, and then held out his hand for the letter. I handed it to him, folded so that only what I wished him to read was visible, and then stood by silent, with my brain going over every sentence which he was reading as if my eyes were on the words also.

"——when I waken, as I often do in these pain-filled nights, I can see your pictured face—last thing my eyes will see—know that you cannot come to me even for an hour. I cannot ask of any man what I would not give myself, and I know that were the conditions reversed, and you my wife, I could not let you go to see even a dying man who had counted upon taking my place. So this is good-by——" I heard Harry Underwood's quick intake of his breath and the crumpling of the paper in his hand, but he did not speak for a minute which seemed an hour while I kept my eyes averted from his face and hardly dared to breathe.

For I knew what a tremendous struggle was going on within him, and though I did not doubt the outcome, I appreciated the turmoil of his emotions and wished that I could efface myself from the landscape. But when at last he spoke his voice was even, controlled, and as I looked at him I saw that his face and eyes were calm, and his lips held the wraith of a smile. He had conquered himself thoroughly—that was plainly to be seen. Whatever he meant to do, he would go through with it steadily, quietly, with no outward hint of whatever emotion might be shaking him.

"Dear girl!" he said softly, "you probably are the best little scout, to say nothing of being the most accomplished special pleader in the whole world. If ever I'm in danger of the electric chair, I'm going to send for you, and then rest easy."

"I'll do my best for you." I told him smiling, accepting his evident wish to postpone the issue between us for a few seconds.

"You needn't have shown me that paragraph," he went on. "If you'd have asked me to say what I know you want to hear, I would have done it. But—I'm not sorry I read it, although it's like seeing a man's heart cut open before you. The poor devil! How he must have—I wonder if I—"

I put my hands up to his shoulders and shook him, my eyes laughing, though they felt far more like tears.

"Stop right there!" I said. "Robert Savarin did love her, but he failed her because of his jealousy. You have been everything that a woman could wish about Marion, and there is no 'wonder' or 'if' or 'and' about this. You can make Lillian far happier than Robert Savarin ever could have done, even if Lillian had never known you. Won't you take my word for this?"

"I'll take your word for anything, little Lady Fair," he said with shining eyes. "And will you take this word back to Lil? I'll tell her myself after a bit, but I want you to tell her first. She is to go to see Robert Savarin as soon as she wishes, and either stay until—the end, or go again as often as she chooses. I understand fully, and I am not only willing that she go, but I shall insist upon her doing so."

"You dear!" I said ecstatically, grasping his arm, for I was more relieved than I was willing to acknowledge even to myself. I had not been quite sure of him in those moments of his battle with his jealousy.

He smiled down at me with something of his old whimsical teasing.

"What have I told you about looking up at a guy like that?" he demanded. "Luckily, I'm now immune to you, but you're going to get yourself soundly kissed some day, I warn you."

"I'll remember," I told him docilely, and then he put another question.

"Do you think Lil ought to take Marion along?" he asked.

"No, a thousand times, no," I answered vehemently, and his eyes showed his relief at my answer. "It would only shadow her Christmas, give her a painful memory and do no possible good. Robert remembers her as a little girl, not as the young woman she almost is now. To see her as she is now, would only disturb him."

"It will shadow her Christmas to have her mother gone on an errand like this," he argued reasonably.

"She may never have to know anything about it," I said slowly.

"What do you mean?" he asked, plainly startled.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, August 12

The astral activities for this day are fairly slow, with matters moving along at mediocre pace. These may, however, be complicated or swerved from harmonious grooves by an indulged inclination to rash, impulsive or quarrelsome behavior under a malevolent aspect of Luna to Mars. The private associations may assume an air of the subtle, cryptic, intriguing or emotional.

Those whose birthday it is need not look for a very lively year, unless it be precipitated by themselves by rash, impetuous or quarrelsome behavior.

A child born on this day may be disposed to be irascible, impetuous and headstrong, unless given proper discipline. It may be peculiarly emotional or difficult to understand in its personal contacts.

Unscrambling the Love Problem

A woman's happiness doesn't depend half so much on the quality of a man's virtues as on the quantity of his love for her.

A man's love has not begun to wane until he stops saying, "How soon can I see you?" and begins saying, "I got here as soon as I could."

It is easier to unscramble an egg than to discover what proportion of a man's "pure, unadulterated love" is pure curiosity, how much pure vanity, and how much pure love of conquest.

Nothing makes a man so happy or a woman so miserable as to be loved "sanely," reasonable—and mildly.

A henpecked husband is one who has had his keyring taken away from him and put through his nose.

Sometimes, the difference between being engaged and being married is merely the difference between keeping a dim light burning in the living room until midnight and keeping a dim light burning in the hall until morning.

Some men struggle out of marriage, others crawl out of it and others just "check out" of it, with perfect ease and nonchalance.

No man realizes what a well-regulated and uneventful life he has been leading until his wife and his stenographer happen to go on their vacations at the same time and leave him to his own diversions.

Many a perfectly good husband is like an extension table; he expands only for company and shuts up with a snap when they are gone.

When a woman gets bored with life it is usually because she is suffering from emotional starvation; when a man grows life-weary, it is mostly because he is suffering from emotional indigestion.

Wedding Invitations to the Groom's Parents

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married soon and I would like to have your advice. My fiance's parents live out of town, but will be here for the wedding. I have met them only twice. Shall I send them an engraved invitation to the wedding, together with the reception card, or shall I write them a note telling them the date we have decided upon, which they do not know?

C. R.

Yes, send them an engraved invitation to your wedding and to your reception. As a matter of fact this is the most important of all the invitations that you send. For the parents of your fiance are the guests of honor at your wedding, and naturally the invitation sent to the guest of honor is the most significant of the entire group. It is, by the way, this reason for which you place the family of your fiance on the right of the aisle through which you pass to the altar. Mail one invitation to Mr. and Mrs. ——, the mother and father of your groom, and a separate one to every other member of the family who is old enough to receive formal invitations.

An Invitation Correct in Every Detail

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I have an invitation to spend my vacation with my future husband and his family. They live a few states from here. Do you think it correct and in good taste for me to visit them under these circumstances. I have never met any of his people, and I know that alone would be embarrassing. We are to be married the early part of 1931, and as that is quite far off, we have decided to see each other on our vacations, but he only gets one week and his coming and going would only leave one day for him to spend here. So he and his family insist that I visit them. I will appreciate your advice. M. R. B.

Of course accept this charming invitation. Why not? It is thoroughly correct, so long as they, as well as he, have extended the invitation. There isn't a reason in the world why you shouldn't go—indeed, there is every reason why you should. That is, since the hostess of the home, his mother, has also written you to come.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Auto-Intoxication the Price of Wrong Living

There is nothing to compare to radiant, vigorous health. So long as we have good health things seem possible. The tasks and pleasures of the day appear interesting and profitable. But with poor health life takes on a very different aspect.

DR COPELAND

How unthinking we are when we allow ourselves to deviate from right habits of living. Bad habits lead to all sorts of ills.

Harm is done when we overindulge in eating, and at the same time neglect our very necessary daily exercise. It is wrong to drive our bodies and minds in tasks and pleasures far beyond human endurance, with consequent loss of sleep and rest. When we mistreat ourselves in these ways poisons are produced within the body, poisons which may undermine the whole system.

We are sure to suffer, even though the quantity of poison developed within the body is very small. The seat of infection may be tiny, yet profound, and even serious symptoms result.

Just what harm may come depends upon the nature of the infection. Some infections are more serious than others. This may be because the infected person is particularly susceptible to the poison or because of the virulence of the poison.

The places where poisons may develop are many. The most likely cause for auto-intoxication is absorption from the intestinal tract. Constipation, or an alternation of constipation and diarrhea, is the first thing that warns the sufferer that his auto-intoxication comes from the intestinal tract. This condition is one of the most widespread troubles of our age.

Some of the many symptoms are headache, dizziness, heartburn and distress in the stomach. There may be loss of sleep, rheumatism or neuralgia pains in the joints and mental depression. Some sort of skin trouble is apt to develop.

To get rid of the trouble the constipation must be overcome. A simple diet, with little or no meat, is advisable. Milk may be substituted for the usual protein food. Plenty of fruit and vegetables are essential.

For those who engage in sedentary work it is very necessary to have regular physical exercise every day in order to keep the body in good working order. Without regular exercise, all the muscles, including the muscles that have to do with digestion, become flabby. In consequence the work of digestion is retarded.

Other causes of auto-intoxication are abscessed teeth or tonsils, a running ear, accumulation of pus in the nasal sinuses, or a chronic ulcer anywhere. Some one such infection may go on for years and then the state of auto-intoxication becomes chronic.

You cannot be well if you are constantly bombarded by these poisons of self-contamination. Visit your dentist or doctor and find out the cause. Then proceed to get the appropriate treatment.

MISS HARD-BOILED

By JANE DIXON

barn the Gloire de France? Across a narrow bridge—careful, now—into the white building.

"Here we are. Aboard at last," Alphonse smiled encouragingly.

"You mean we're on the ship?"

"But certainement, mon petite. Where is it you think we are? Come, we will find your cabin. Mademoiselle Greta will be waiting for us there."

Up a stairway banked with flowers. Then into an elevator. Long corridors with many doors, like a hotel. People streaming through them. People running. People walking. People who laughed. People with solemn faces.

"Ah, ici, mon cher." Alphonse motioned her to follow. "Look. I am on French soil one second, and already I think French." He threw open a door. Raquel stepped through it.

She was in a room very much like the one she had liked in the house of Madame Bosart. A gray room with silver walls. Even the furniture was gray. The gray of dawn with a hint of rose in it. Where would she sleep? There was no bed, no couch, in this room.

Flowers in vases on the floor. Roses with long stems. A corsage of orchids on a table, rumpled, as if they had been worn and tossed there carelessly. Someone was in the room beyond, the half-open door.

"Miss Greta," Alphonse called.

A girl appeared in the door. She looked very young. Taller than Raquel. Something quaint about her, and boyish. A pink and blue and golden girl.

The two models appraised each other, woman fashion.

"Your room is there," said Alphonse to Raquel, indicating a door. It was bigger than her room in the hotel. There was a canopy over her bed. The color of that old yellow cotton rose she once pinned on her hat. Shot with silver.

A few people came into the room. Friends of Alphonse. Business friends. His broker. His lawyer with a gushing little wren of a wife who rhapsodied over the customer., Alphonse's sailings were always as nearly secret as he could keep them. He let his less distinguished competitors sound the trumpets and the cymbals.

Tiny sandwiches on a silver tray and iced champagne were served.

"Alphonse sent this down from his private stock," whispered Greta. Raquel wondered how she knew. She had only sipped from her glass.

At the last moment there was a rush of footsteps outside the door of the suite. A woman dashed into the room, threw herself upon Greta with a great show of affection. A buxom woman with three shades of henna hair, a green spangled dress and many ropes of imitation pearls draped across her ample breast.

"Hello, Hattie." Greta responded to the embrace with something like aversion. "How did you find out I was going?"

"You naughty child, to treat me this way. If I hadn't met one of the girls, quite by accident, in a place uptown, I'd never have known a word of it."

"Umm. Where's Alec?"

"He's out there, dear, in the hall. Please ask him to come in."

"No let him stay there."

The woman pouted, pulled Greta aside. A whispered conversation between them. She flounced from the room.

"It must be nice to have friends see you off like this," Raquel said to the boyish girl. She felt lonely. Out of things.

"That was no friend. That was my mother." The girl laughed harshly at her own humor.

"Your mother—"

"Uh-huh. Hattie would show up—if she thought there was any money in it. She had a nerve, though, bringing her boy friend."

"All ashore." The warning was being shouted through the passages.

"Come," said Alphonse. "We will go on deck."

Save old kid gloves and use them as coverings for the finger nail buffer. Glazed or chamois gloves are equally desirable for this purpose. Even when a nail varnish is applied, it is desirable to give a foundation polish with powder or compact. Tinting the nails to match the color of the frock is a practice that is growing more popular every day.

Sauntering is not exercise. A brisk walk, with arms swinging at the sides, is a recreation that is desirable and beneficial in every way. Keep the chest up. Point toes straight ahead. Hips back. Good walkers retain slender, supple figures and old age never catches them. Five miles a day should be the rule. Ten miles are better, twice as good.

Household Hints

Lemon juice in dish water cuts the grease and incidently helps to protect the housewife's hands. Lemon juice is a marvelous bleaching agent.

Sponges used in the bathroom may be kept soft and sweet if washed occasionally in warm water to which a few drops of lemon juice have been added.

It seldom occurs to us that ferns may need something a little more nourishing than plain water as a steady diet. And right now when every thoughtful housewife is considering the cool beauty of a bit of green planted here and there about her summer home whether in city or country, is a very good time to tell you that two tablespoons of olive oil dropped at the roots about once a month will encourage luxuriant growth.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

I've got to eat some of my words. But I will do so gladly, only I want better proof than a mere statement. I said people who got married through a correspondence courtship via matrimonial advertisements couldn't expect to be happy. I thought it was gamble enough when the people met through friends, and each knew the background of the other. But today my mail is full of letters from people claiming they know couples married that way who have been extremely happy for years. I got letters from the people themselves and they have no complaint to make against married life. Some of them have children and one boasts six sons.

The most interesting letter came from Detroit, Mich. The man's first cousin living in Mississippi, met her husband through an advertisement, went to his home town and married him and they have seven children. They have been ideally happy. I wish Mrs. Chamberlin, you would have her write to me and send me pictures. I am always willing to back up when I am wrong. But I might add that there are always exceptions to prove a rule, and maybe this is one.

From Hammond, Ind., comes news that a lady there got her husband by joining a letter club. After she wrote letters a while she asked him to come and visit her, and in 24 hours after the man's arrival they were married. They have a son 10 years old. They have arguments now and then which wax hot enough to make life interesting, but so do all the other couples they know. She sounds very sincere. They all give names and addresses.

Another woman joined a correspondence club, got a husband; they had a child, and later the man died. Then she joined a lonely heart club. "Sifted the sheep from the goats," she says, and got a second husband the same way. He has been a perfect father to her first husband's child, and he is a devoted mate. They have been married 12 years. She says success, as in any other marriage, depends upon the good sense of the parties concerned.

Another Detroiter writes that she met her husband this way, he came to meet her parents and her little boy (she was a widow), and after they were married they adopted a little girl. They corresponded two and a half years before he asked her to marry him, and then he went to Canada to get her. She says he is a good man, and I can imagine he is when he will father two children not his own and merit their devotion.

Any number of people wrote that they know people who married this way and were happy, but you can't ever tell from outward appearances and I want the news from the parties concerned.

Amazing isn't it? I haven't decided yet who is to get the $5. Looks as if the lady who got the two good husbands should have it, if she will prove what she says.

NO CLUB CLAIMS STAR FIRST-SACKER

THE POSSIBILITY OF the existence of a "gentlemen's agreement," or a sort of mandatory waiver pact, among the magnates of the major baseball leagues, whereby a player who is adjudged "undesirable" for some reason or other may be shunted out of the big show, even though still capable of holding down a regular job in fast company, has often been a subject of fan speculation. In a number of instances, seemingly, it has not mattered that an athlete looked good enough to help any club, as measured by standard playing values. If he happened to incur the ill well of men higher up, the trap door was sprung and out he went.

Lu Blue

The latest puzzling waiver case involves a pastimer of no less prominence than Lu Blue, first baseman of the St. Louis Browns. Though a veteran of 32, Blue still is as capable a first sacker as can be found in any league. Yet it is learned that the Brown bosses recently asked waivers on him—and got them. Not only from all the other clubs in their own league, mind you, but from all those in the National League, as well.

BLUE IS BACK in the St. Louis lineup, doing a good job at leading off in the batting order and playing his usual swell fielding game around the gateway. Mound City critics say he will be kept, and express the opinion that the waiver request was only the old ruse of throwing a scare into a slumping player for the purpose of stirring him up. But that doesn't explain the action of 15 other big league clubs in passing up a man of Blue's known value.

It couldn't have been because his throwing arm is ailing, as the trouble is said to be of only a temporary nature. Nor could it have been because he will be a 10-year man after this season, which will lessen his selling value, as he cannot then be sold to a minor league club without his consent and must be given his freedom if no major league club claims him on a waiver request. The first-sacker is believed to be good for a lot more service and would have cost any claiming American League club only $4,000 and any claiming National League club only $7,500 under the inter-league regulations.

THE REAL REASON for the waiver request is said to have been that Blue not long ago had hot words with a St. Louis club business official that almost ended in blows. For that reason it was decided to get rid of him, and evidently the other clubs in the two leagues were induced to fall in with the plan to railroad him to the minors before the expiration of the 10-year limit.

Bill Killefer

That circumstances forced his retention, for the present, at least, is indicated by a remark credited to Manager Bill Killefer. The latter is quoted as having said that Blue was in there playing on his nerve alone, owing to an arm injury, but that "we've got to have him."

MOST FANS ARE convinced that there was something more than a playing reason behind the waiver request and the action of 15 other clubs in going along. They recall that it was because of differences with an official of the same club that Manager Dan Howley was shipped out of the American League. And they recollect that such players as Carl Mays, Harry Heilmann, Bob Meusel, Leo Durocher and others also were waived on by all the clubs in that league when they still had a lot of major league service left in them. The evidence is pretty strong that in the American League, at least, there is a system that enables club owners to get waivers on any athlete against whom they develop a grudge, regardless of how good a player he may be.

POSSIBLY THE DEVELOPMENTS of the last two days have caused the Brooklyn players to pause in their premature figuring as to how much they are going to get out of the world series. Things don't look nearly so sure for them since their old teammate, Burleigh Grimes, and Bill Hallahan spilled them twice in St. Louis yesterday while the Cubs were taking two games from the Braves. The Robins have lost three decisions in a row, and in the three games they scored only five runs against Flint Rhem, Grimes and Hallahan.

As a result, Brooklyn's margin over Chicago has been cut to a single game, and furthermore, the Robins are only three and a half games ahead of New York. Rather a fair sort of race. Brooklyn's edge over the Bruins, at that, is really not a lead at all, as the two clubs are even in the "Lost" column and the Dodgers are in front only because they have played two games more than the Cubs and won them. And tomorrow they must open a four-game series with those same Bruins on the latter's grounds.

BABE RUTH MAY not succeed in breaking his own all-time major league record of 60 home runs, but it is certain as anything can be in baseball that a new National League record, at least is going to be hung up.

Hack Wilson

Three homers in the Cub-Braves dual bill yesterday gave Hack Wilson a total of 39 for the season, and with 46 games more to play there is hardly any doubt that he will get the five more needed to break Chuck Klein's league mark of 43, set last year. Ruth, who made his forty-second yesterday, may have to hustle to beat out Wilson for even this season's honors in the majors, as his lead over Hack in circuit wallops has been cut to three.

A BREATH OF the old days of boxing in the Pittsburgh district, when the ring activities of the amateurs as well as the professionals kept fistic interest at white heat hereabouts, is brought by the presence here on a visit of one of this section's greatest glove product of all time. The once internationally famous Jack Bennett, who, around 30 years ago, was not far from the world lightweight championship, is visiting with friends in McKeesport, his former home town, and during the Giant series has been greeting old acquaintances at Forbes Field. Jack, who is 52, was in business for many years in Philadelphia and Atlantic City, but is now located at Niagara Falls, N. Y. He still keeps in close touch with the game in which he once was an outstanding star and is an ardent follower of sports in general.

BENNETT, IN HIS heyday, was one of the fastest and cleverest ring workmen that ever swung a pair of gloves. Starting at an amateur tournament at the old P. A. C. here on December 14, 1894, he defeated Loudon Campbell in his first bout, and in a single year, in which he lost only four decisions—those of John Wongo, Leo Walker, Jack McClelland and Jim Ginnelly—he beecame the sensation of the amateur ranks here and was induced to go East and turn professional.

His rise in the pro ranks was rapid. His speed and skill carried him close to the world title, and there was hardly a prominent lightweight or welterweight of that time whom he did not meet.

Among those he fought were Joe Gans, Rube Ferns, Kid McPartland, Eddie Connolly, Matty Matthews, Charley McKeever, Owen Ziegler, Bull McCarthy, Stanton Abbott, Jack Daly, Horace Leeds, Mike Leonard, George Plant, Paddy Sheehan, Pete Sheehan, Eddie Kennedy, Martin Judge, Leslie Pearce, Billy Vernon, Mose La Fontise, Billy Ernst, Jim Penn, Charles Burns, Elwood McCluskey, Tom McCune, Rufus [illegible], Young Kessler, John Jenkins, Billy Porter, [illegible], first professional fight), Charles [illegible] as Muldoon's Pickaninny), [illegible] Jack Ryan, Young Mahoney [illegible] Plante, a 20-round mill in a [illegible] on the South Side on the welterweight mantle of supremacy until July 25, of last year, when he lost on a foul in two rounds in Detroit to Jackie Fields, who since has been dethroned by Young Jack Thompson.

BUCK'S BIGGEST TEST

The rising young contender is Jack (Buck) McTiernan, of Swissvale, eldest of a flock of children whose father is dead. McTiernan has shown flashes of greatness in many of his bouts and may scale the heights. Dundee, stripped of the title though he is, presents the most formidable test so far faced by McTiernan, for Joe is a master of ring strategy and packs a load of experience along with a hardy fighting style and a punch. He is a veteran of 10 years in the ring.

McTiernan has primed himself for a bid for a knockout victory and will be gunning for it. He will carry the fight to the former champion and hopes the latter will prove just a stepping stone in his march to the top.

JACOBS GAINS THIRD ROUND

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Two of America's best among an outstanding crop of tennis youngsters were eliminated in the second round of the Eastern grass court championships yesterday.

Frank Shields of New York, twelfth in the national ranking, was defeated by a virtual unknown, Arthur S. Fowler, of New York, 3-6, 6-4, 6-1.

The second favorite to fall was Ellsworth Vines, Jr., of Pasadena, winner of the recent metropolitan turf court title. Vines was beaten by Bryan Grant, Atlanta youth, in three sets, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

Most of the other favorites advanced without trouble. Big Bill Tilden, defending champion, won two matches to gain the third round as did John Van Ryn, of East Orange, N. J.; Eddie Jacobs, of Pittsburgh; Dick Murphy, of Utica, N. Y.; Cliff Sutter, of New Orleans, and Wilbur F. Coen, Jr., of Kansas City. Fritz Mercur, of Bethlehem, who had won his first round match Saturday, defeated A. Lincoln Halberstadt, of New York, 8-10, 6-3, 6-2 to gain the third round.

Both British entrants, H. G. N. Lee and S. J. Perry, were beaten. Lee was eliminated in the first round by Edward W. Feibleman, of New York, 6-2, 6-3. Perry, after beating Isidore Biltchik, of New York, 6-1, 7-5, was beaten in the second round by Sutter, 6-3, 6-3.

Tilden won his first round match from Herbert L. Bowman, of New York, 6-2, 6-3, without trouble but was forced to call upon reserve energy to put out Harris Coggeshall, of Des Moines, 6-4, 9-7, in the second round.

RESORT EVENT DRAWS LOCALS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN,
Staff Correspondent.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, Md., Aug. 11.—The eleventh annual Western Maryland tennis championships swing into action on the courts of the Women's Civic Club here this morning.

With almost three-score entries in the men's singles division, the event bids fair to out-do even the fastest and most colorful of its predecessors, despite the fact that the continued general drought has rendered the problem of keeping the clay playing surfaces in tournament trim a rather serious one.

ARKLE SEEDED NO. 1

B. F. Arkle, Wheeling youth and former Pitt freshman star, will defend the trophy and title that he copped from Sam Cohen, of Beckley, W. Va., on the gallery court here a year ago. Arkle tops the seeded list and is immediately succeeded by Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. ace and 1923 Western Pennsylvania champion. C. P. Trask, of Charleston, rates number three with Billy Ramsay, Uniontown and Lafayette College luminary, fourth; John Brown, Mount Lebanon, fifth; Tack Hammer, Westmoreland County premier, sixth; Robert Brown, of Davis-Elkins, seventh, and W. T. Clardy, of the Westinghouse team, eighth.

Jack Beatty, Stanton Heights, captain, is another favorite in the draw, his first round tussle with Dillinger Hixson, Greensburg, satellite, looming as perhaps the outstanding early joust of the meeting.

STARS ENTERED

Edgar Alcorn, Mount Lebanon comer, is likewise entered for the milling, as are the Greensburgers, Don Snyder and Theodore Hammer. The Bridgeville lads, Maurice Sapperstein and Ollie Jones; Dr. Walter Foster, of Grafton; Bill Servick, Duquesne Library first man; Willis McCabe, Penn State and Coraopolis performer;

RACING HEAD HIT, KILLED

STERLING, Ill., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Robert Whalen, of Chicago, president of the National Automobile Racing Association, was killed yesterday when he was struck by a speeding car at a dirt-track race held under the auspices of his organization.

Whalen was attempting to keep spectators from pushing onto the track when the swerving race car hit him. Mrs. Whalen, who was attending the race, saw her husband killed.

A delightful scramble, is one way of describing the National League race today, unless you prefer the old English custom of referring to the blooming thing as a confounded mixup. Any way you want to take it, however, it's the divvil's own fight, with the Cubs within one game of the high-flyin' Robins and the scrappy and skillful Giants only two and one-half games removed from the runnersup.

Burleigh Grimes

The Pirates and Giants are due to wind up their series this afternoon. Manager Ens, as usual, is hard put for pitchers, it being likely he will call upon Heinie Meine, who worked most of one of Friday's clashes. Fred Mitchell and Pete Donohue are both ready for the McGraw ticket.

The Phillies will follow the Giants into Pittsburgh. Shotton's team will open a four-game series with a double-header tomorrow.

The sweepstakes were turned into a free-for-all yesterday. With Burleigh Grimes and Bill Hallahan pitching fine ball, the Cardinals twice toppled the league leaders; the Cubs, with Charlie Root and Pat Malone starring, making a two-game gain by trimming the Braves twice.

DEFEATS AID GIANTS

The Men of McGraw were not singing over the gain made by the Bruins, but they certainly cheered the happenings in St. Louis. All in all, it looks like an interesting August and September for National League followers. Over in the American League the Peerless Athletics seem to have the thing on the ice.

The strain of meeting all the flag-contenders in succession has taken a toll of the Buccos. They threw everything in their repertoire at the Cardinals and Cubs as they flung them back, but they had little left for the Robins and Giants, although Uncle Robbie and his crew had to have a lot of breaks to win two games here last week, while the Giants themselves doubtless will admit they had a dozen horseshoes to cop Saturday's gruelling battle.

BUCCOS BEATEN

The Pirates failed to emerge from the slump they slipped into last week yesterday, even in an exhibition game, and were defeated by the Fosterville Merchants at Youngstown, 5 to 2.

Coen, a sandlot hurler, pitched fine ball against the National Leaguers, limiting them to eight hits, which were kept well scattered. Bernard Walters went the route for the Pirates and was touched for 10 safe hits.

The Merchants put the game away in the sixth inning when they tallied three runs. Hits by Hughes, Dick Goldberg and Andy

BROOKLYN FLAG HOPES JOLTED; CUBS GAIN

CARDS DEFEAT LEADERS IN DUAL BILL

Associated Press.

Once again the Brooklyn Robins are finding the pathway through the western half of the National League circuit a thorny road to travel in their quest of the championship pennant.

On their last swing through the West, the pace setting Robins failed to break even, dropping seven of their 13 games, and if the results at St. Louis the last three days are any criterion then Brooklyn's pennant hopes are due to receive a severe jolt before the Robins return to Flatbush.

The second and third blow in two days was handed the Robins yesterday when the Cardinals took a double-header, the first 8 to 2 and the nightcap 4 to 0. The double defeat while the Cubs were winning two gave Brooklyn just a one game advantage over the league champions.

HALLAHAN BRILLIANT

Burleigh Grimes pitched steady ball in the first but Wild Bill Hallahan was brilliant in the closing contest. He let the Robins down with five hits and fanned 12, striking out seven of the nine men that faced him in the third, fourth and fifth innings.

The Cubs took the measure of the Boston Braves 6 to 0 and 11 to 1. A pair of highly polished pitching performances by Charlie Root and Pat Malone and Hack Wilson's home run bat accounted for Chicago's triumphs. Root set the Braves down with three hits in the opener while Wilson blasted out his thirty-seventh and thirty-eighth home runs. Malone produced a five-hit game in the second while Hack was sending his thirty-ninth homer over the wall.

PHILS WIN PAIR

The lowly Phillies also won a double-header, taking the Cincinnati Reds into camp by the scores of 18 to 0 and 4 to 3. Four Red hurlers were touched for 21 safeties in the first while Collins had the edge over Rixey in the nightcap.

Turning on the Cleveland Indians, the Washington Senators managed to hold onto second place in the American League by a margin of two points by slugging out an 18 to 6 victory. Eleven runs in the eighth inning accounted for the large score.

The Yankees kept pace with the Senators in a home run festival with the St. Louis Browns, the New Yorkers winning, 14 to 11. Babe Ruth connected with his forty-second of the year while Combs, Goslin and Blue also rapped out circuit blows.

Earl Whitehill chalked up his ninth straight victory for Detroit as the Tigers turned back the Boston Red Sox 4 to 2.

Buffalo Captures N. Y. Legion Title

BUFFALO, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—The Carl Millers of Buffalo won the state American Legion junior baseball title here yesterday by defeating Lynbrook 14 to 1. The visitors' errors exceeded their hits and up to the end of the sixth inning they sent only 19 men to the plate. The score:

Buffalo	14	9	1

Wingate succeeds Carl F. Kauffmann, of Pittsburgh, as the National Public Links champion, Kauffmann having been disqualified on a technicality in the qualifying round after he had won the national laurels three years in a row. With Kauffmann out, Wingate was the favorite to win, and he came through handily until the final round, when, after leading all of the way, he permitted his opponent, Joseph Greene, of Philadelphia, to come from behind and square the match on the thirty-fifth green. It was only by negotiating a stymie on the home hole that Wingate was able to eke out a 1 up victory.

Chilly Sauce

Ball-of-the-earth oldtimers like William (Kid) Gleason are apt to go into raptures when they see clever young ball players inflamed with the same love for the sport that animated Gleason, McGraw, Clarke, Cobb and other luminaries of the game gone by. So when the Kid experienced a few glances at Joe Cronin in action against the Athletics, he waxed enthusiastic.

"That boy is the Washington club," said Gleason in discussing Cronin with one of the Pirates recently. The veteran not only storied in Joe's ability, he went into ecstacies over the fighting, intelligent style exemplified by Cronin especially when the battle was at stake.

The Senators and Athletics were engaged in a hot battle in Shibe Park. A young secondbaseman was playing the bag in this game and the former Pirate spark plug was trying to bolster up the boy in a difficult, runners being on third and first with the score tied after nine innings. Cronin, according to Gleason, was mapping out the plan of defense for the recruit on his left.

"If the ball is hit to you on the ground let me have it with everything you can get on it," admonished Joe. "I'll take the responsibility; if I drop it the game is tied up, anyhow. Then's hold back any, and I'm going to give it to you the same way if I get it."

There was a speech of a winning ballplayer, in the mind of a character of such positive type as Gleason. And the Kid is relating it appeared to get so much satisfaction out of it as though Cronin were a member of the Athletics, who are favored and favored by the presence on their roster of Gleason.

Regarded now as the best shortstop in the American League, Cronin is batting better than .330 and he has driven in almost 100 runs, not to mention nearly another hundred which he has scored. Joe is outdoing both Travis Jackson, Glenn Wright, Rabbit Maranville and Charley Gelbert, National League standouts, in his first banner year. The Senators were not figured to be a flag contender but partly on account of the brilliance of Sonny Joe they have made a fair fight out of what was feared would be a walkaway for the "A's."

Speaking of youthful diamond stars who can drive in better than 100 markers and score as many while playing high-grade ball in all departments, we have a case right here at Forbes Field in that well-known Polishman, Count Comorsky. Adam stands to set a new mark for driving in runs in Pittsburgh's baseball history and he should be over the century in individual run-making when the curtain falls. Commy is only a few below 100 runs in the punch department.

SWIM POSTPONED

CINCINNATI, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—The annual Ohio River Marathon swim was postponed yesterday because of the present unsanitary condition of the Ohio River. Dr. William H. Peters, health commissioner, said that the river, as the result of the drought, is in a worse more unsafe condition for the contest than at any time during the 15 years such events have been conducted.

Sport Vignettes

Several weeks ago, a new boxer made his debut in local rings, opposing Jimmy Thomas, Negro bantamweight, of the Hill, in a preliminary at Hickey Park .... The newcomer was introduced as Billy Campbell, of Brookline .... They came together fighting in the first round, and Campbell appeared green and awkward and took a bad beating .... Then he came up for the second round and began fighting as a southpaw and the tide suddenly turned .... Instead of Campbell, it was Thomas who appeared ill at ease .... They finished the six rounds with Thomas gaining the decision, but knowing he had been in a fight and frustrated in his hope of scoring the knockout victory that had appeared imminent in the opening round .... Nothing more was heard from Campbell until last Monday night, when he took on Georgie Tomosky, tough gamester from Turtle Creek with a penchant for slugging .... Campbell slugged it out with Georgie until he finally connected with a left to the body in the third round that stretched out Tomosky for the count .... Then the fans began to sit up and pay attention to Campbell .... They asked questions about him, for they had seen Tomosky in some hard fights and never had seen him so badly hurt with one punch .... And thereby, as they say, hangs a tale .... Billy is 23 years old and is employed as a stereotyper's apprentice on a local newspaper .... He came here four months ago, from Detroit, where he began his boxing career three years ago, and has boxed such well-known ringsters as Franklin Young, the speedy Negro flyweight, and Billy Shaw, the bantamweight, who has boxed all of the top-notchers .... His real name is Onnie Parechia, and he is an Armenian. His only living relative is his father, who is in Detroit .... Billy says he came to Pittsburgh because working and boxing conditions were bad around Detroit .... He was so anxious to get started boxing around here that he took the first offer he received, saying nothing about the fact that he was a southpaw for fear of encountering difficulty in obtaining matches. After the Thomas bout was made, there was danger of it falling through when it became known that Billy was boxing from the wrong side in the gymnasium, so he told his manager, Irish Kane, he could box either way and offered to turn around and assume an orthodox pose to save the situation .... That explains why he came out fighting with his left hand and foot extended in the first round, but turned around to his natural manner after taking that drubbing at the start .... In the future, he'll do all of his boxing as a southpaw, whether the boys like it or not, and he promises to battle his way to the top in his division with the aid of his sleep-inducing punch .... Followers of independent football in the Pittsburgh district were grieved today to learn of the death of Fritz Quinn, 28, star fullback of the McKeesport Olympics the last three seasons. He was killed in an automobile accident at Stoverstown, Pa., while en route to Atlantic City for his vacation before the opening of a new campaign .... Fritz, a police sergeant in Glassport, began his athletic career at Glassport High School and then played at Duquesne University and Detroit University .... Followed three seasons with the Glassport Patricians and two with the Glassport Odds, after which he became a star for the Olympics. He also played center as well as fullback, and, as a baseball catcher, made the grade with the Martinsburg (W. Va.) club in the Blue Ridge League. He was extremely popular with other players and the fans.—HARRY KECK.

GUNN IN LEAD IN WEST PENN TOURNEY

BULLETIN.

P. O. Hart, of Canton, O., former pro at Wheeling, W. Va., took the lead in the West Penn Open golf championship at Oakmont today when he turned in a card of 39-39-78. Watts Gunn, Oakmont, was second with 79, and Ted Luther, third, with 80.

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

Watts Gunn of Oakmont, was leading the early finishers at the end of the first 18 holes in the annual West Penn Open golf championship being played today over the famous Hulton course. The tournament is a 36-hole medal play event.

The amateur star, who formerly represented Atlanta, Ga., in the major golf tournaments of the country, was the only entrant among the early finishers to break 80. He turned in a card of 38-41—79 to set the pace. His card:

Out .....544 443 653—38
In .....556 445 345—41—79

Poor putting on the last nine holes robbed Gunn of a chance to improve his score. He required three putts on five greens during his inward journey.

Vincent Eldred, of Highland, defending champion, appeared out of the running due to an 88 he required this morning.

Tomorrow the American Legion of Allegheny County has carded a tournament at the Aleoma Country Club.

AMATEUR WEDNESDAY

On Wednesday, John Graham, of South Hills and Oakmont, will begin the fight in defense of his Western Pennsylvania amateur crown, the 18-hole qualifying round for which has brought but one of the largest fields ever to compete in the event.

All of the best players in Western Pennsylvania are in the fold, including the Pennsylvania amateur champion, Greer McIlvain, of the home club. Some tough golf is anticipated.

Tonight Ben Loeffler, professional at the Valley Heights Country Club, is giving an exhibition of driving at the Wood Park range, which has illuminated its course and is inaugurating night play. Loeffler will begin his exhibition at 9 o'clock.

Dr. C. S. Brandon captured the Aleoma C. C. championship yesterday by defeating Dr. W. H. K. McDiarmid, 8 and 7, in the final round of the annual championship tournament. The new champions also won the tourney medal laurel wreath.

W. J. Jacquette took down the club title for 1930 at Wildwood, downing F. H. Hunter in the 36-hole final match, 6 and 5.

The big sandlot game of the evening will take place at West Field, Homestead, with the Aces and Whitaker, local rivals, fighting it out in a West Penn League contest.

One of the real races in the second half battles is being staged in this loop, and, seeing that Verona Community was beaten Saturday by North Bessemer, any of the five clubs now can win the second half flag.

Jack Fertig wants to win this particular game to keep pace with Wilmerding, but should George Vogt's club cop, then Whitaker will be up there with the Aces. The game will be called at 6:30 and the greatest crowd of the season will be on hand.

COLLEGIANS FACE TEST

Allegheny Collegians will visit Schenley High School Field to do battle with the Coseltts in the Central League. The Collegians are in second place and cannot afford to lose this game.

The Mine Safety nine will do its stuff at delightful Camp Horne this evening. A. H. Burchfield, Jr., the popular treasurer of the Commercial and Industrial loop, will be back from his vacation today and is expected to be in the game for the home nine.

Hornes and Ryan's club are battling for second place in the league race. Gettings probably will oppose Bobby Beitel on the slab.

A nice little battle in the junior ranks will be staged this evening when the Brodericks meet Jednota in the Minor League. Jednota is fighting for the leadership now held by the Brodericks. Another game in the same loop finds Melrose meeting William Penn.

SHOEMEN AT P. V.

Two games will be flashed in the City League. Book Shoe will show its stuff against Pleasant Valley at Olympia Park, and Stowe Civics hook up with the J. L. Thomas nine. Book Shoe is anything but out of the second half race. Homewood and Dormont are leading the loop, but both may yet falter.

The Homestead Grays play at Parker's Landing this evening. Their game at Charleroi tomorrow evening has been canceled.

The Homestead Grays captured both ends of a double bill from the Five Points nine yesterday, winning the first encounter by a 16-0 score and taking the second, 9 to 2.

J. L. Thomas walloped the fast traveling Crawford Stars, 8 to 3. Homestead Aces won over Springdale, 13 to 7, and the St. Clair Frogs defeated Becks Run, 14 to 1. North Side Elks defeated Banksville, 9 to 5.

In the Eastern Ohio League, Cambridge defeated Fultonham, 7 to 4.

U. S. Stars Beaten In German Meet

DARMSTADT, Germany, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—The so-called international intercollegiate track and field championships came to an end here yesterday with no record performances.

Simson, of England, won the 400-meter hurdles in 54 2-10 seconds. Koernig, Germany, won the 200 meters in 21 3-10 seconds and Mueller, Germany, the 800 meters in one minute 58 2-10 seconds.

The 5,000 meters went to Dahlstroem, Sweden, in 15 minutes, 24 seconds, and the javelin throw to Suski, Finland, with a toss of 217 feet, 10¼ inches. Nishida, of Japan, won the pole vault at 13 feet 5 13-16 inches.

SPRING FOOTBALL

The newspapers carried a story to the effect that there is a movement on foot at the University of Wisconsin to eliminate spring football and that the other Big Ten schools would be asked to pass the same rule. Naturally, if this rule were to be passed by the Big Ten, Notre Dame would have to follow suit and could have no spring football.

Knute Rockne

Whether or not Wisconsin has spring football is the business of the authorities at Madison. However, when they suggest that all the leading schools in the Middle West shall follow suit, abolishing spring football, then they are speaking out of turn. Spring football is no problem at Illinois, Michigan, Purdue, Northwestern, Ohio State, Chicago and other Mid-western schools.

Teams Play Tie In 18 Innings

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—A two-in-one baseball game was played here yesterday by the Huntington and Charleston teams of the Tri-State League and it ended with no decision after all. The game was called at the end of 18 innings on account of darkness, with the score 2-2. It took four hours to play it.

The Charleston team made runs in the second and third innings and went scoreless from then on.

HOPES SLIGHT FOR W. PA. IN A. A. U. MEET

By JESS CARVER

Either because they do not possess the class or will not be in shape, Pittsburgh district track and field stars do not figure to cut very much of a swath in the coming junior and senior national A. A. U. championships at the Pitt Stadium.

Looking over the list of tri-state district eligibles, only a scant half dozen appear likely to down anything worth cheering over. Pete Bowen, Pitt's flying world traveler, national intercollegiate quarter-mile champion, will be back from his annual sojourn in Norway, Sweden, Germany and points thereabouts in time to compete in the senior quarter mile. Pete tops the list of local entries.

Rob Roy, holder of the A. M. A. mark for the 880, who, because he's never won a senior A. A. U. title is eligible for the junior competition, may get to first base in the middle distance race, but his best time of 1:58.4 hardly figures to win. Roy, possibly, is in the best shape of the local contingent.

MERRIMAN IN WEIGHTS

Lee Merriman, hefty Beaver Falls lad, a junior weight champion, is in the range of possible point scorers in the weights. Hank Schnelbach, former Duquesne sprinter, isn't in shape at present and will find it difficult to get into proper trim to make a showing in the sprints. Joe Pesci, a good distance man, (the Duquesne Pesci, you know), also needs a lot of work.

The two Negro stars, Woody Harris, of Pitt and Ambridge, and Thomas, of Geneva, who won the A. M. A. 100 and 200-yard championships this year, haven't been working out much since and will find the going in the junior sprinting as torrid as the weather has been of late, which is very, very torrid.

WATCH JUMPERS!

If Cornell Cooper, Pitt's high jump star, and Branch and Spencer, Fifth Avenue High luminaries, are in trim (they haven't been seen training much, so I'm told), they'll land places in the high jump with little trouble. Lenny Priedman, tri-state intercollegiate javelin champion and record holder, who's been training with his spear consistently since he wound up his college competition Memorial Day in the Conference meet, is a certain place winner in the event.

The Tipoff

In the place of the 20 pounds of extra beef he reported with a year ago, Johnny Kezis, Tech's pocking fullback, will only have eight or 10 pounds to work off during preliminary training this fall.

Did you know that Hughy Critz' pupils is president of Mississippi A. and M. College, where Red Eagle will serve as assistant football coach this year? Well, you know it now.

Geneva College will boast an outstanding and outstanding a backfield man as any national college or university in the section this fall—he being clever Johnny Knapik.

Under Howard Harpster's tutelage, Knapik should develop into twice as valuable a player as he has been during the last two years at the Conewanier school, and he's been good enough both years to rate all-district and all-eastern mention.

They are gonna trade jobs at Penn State, are Dutch Hermann and Larry Conover. Dutch will take Larry's job as assistant varsity coach and Larry will drill the freshmen.

Bob Fletcher, Tech's towering guard, is back from Tennessee, where he spent the summer handling a pick and shovel and toting ice. He'll be in great shape to bowl the tar out of the Tartan hopefuls who did NOT put in such strenuous summers.

Bill Schempp Wins Dusty Auto Grind

RACELAND, Ky., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Bill Schempp, Pittsburgh, won a 100-mile automobile race here yesterday afternoon from John Gum, Elkins, W. Va., and Bill Chittum, Columbus, O., on the Raceland dirt track. The three were the only ones of the 16 starters to finish the race.

The time for the 100 miles was two and one-half hours. Before the race was finished the surface of the track was so deep in dust that it was impossible to make much speed.

GEMS, STOGIES SET PACE

Fairmont's fast traveling Black Diamonds again enjoyed prosperity in the seven-day period in the Middle Atlantic League, which ended Saturday. The Gems, who tied for victory honors the previous week with Clarksburg, deadlocked last week with Wheeling, each team capturing five of seven contests. In addition, the Black Diamonds battled to a tie with Jeannette in a game that darkness halted.

Scottdale's Little Cardinals finished close behind with a record of five triumphs and three losses. They slaughtered opposing hurlers for 104 hits and counted 70 times to lead the way in those departments. Scottdale also tied with Charleroi for home run honors, each team poling 10.

Yesterday the Fairies were defeated by Cumberland, 8 to 5, when the Colts staged a four-run rally in the ninth inning. Davin smacked a pair of home runs for the Colts.

At Johnstown, the Johnnies hammered out a 10-to-5 victory over Charleroi, scoring six runs in the seventh inning.

Jeannette suffered another defeat, bowing to Clarksburg at Clarksburg by a count of 12 to 8. A six-run attack in the second inning brought the Generals the victory.

Scottdale defeated Wheeling at Wheeling, 7 to 4, Lang limiting the Stogies to four hits.

PONTETCANET WINS

DEAUVILLE, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Pontetcanet, bay son of Gunmet out of Pontetchrin, belonging to Robert Lazard, won the Jacques Le Marois stakes, Deauville's annual mile classic for three-year-old colts in the fast time of 1:37 flat yesterday. The winner's time was considered amazing in view of a track made sloppy by a pelting rain.

Long's Sport Comment

March 6, 1899, promoted by the late Mike McNamara of the Emerald Club, was one of the most famous local shows of that period.

ANNOUNCEMENT FROM DETROIT that Lloyd Brazil has applied for license to wed his school-day sweetheart, Miss Leola Cooley, comes as a reminder that the curtain has fallen on one of the most brilliant of football careers.

Brazil, who was graduated two months ago, brought his college playing days to a close when the University of Detroit eleven staged its final game of the 1929 schedule, and when the 1930 campaign opens the gridiron sport will be without a star that ranked among the brightest in recent seasons.

Lloyd Brazil

EVEN IN THE early stages of his Detroit career Brazil was an outstanding halfback, as Pittsburgh fans were in a position to observe at first hand when he shone in Detroit's 12-to-7 victory over Carnegie Tech at Forbes Field in 1927. He continued to develop under Coach Gus Dorais until he became unquestionably one of the best in the whole country, and there were many who wondered at the failure of some of the leading football critics to give him greater consideration in their all-America selections. There was nothing connected with a halfback's job that Lloyd couldn't do as well as the best, he had few equals as a triple threat, and he was just as good defensively as he was on the attack. A born football player, and as close as they come to being perfet, and if he had been playing for one of the more prominent colleges in the game his name would have been splashed all over the sport pages as that of one of the greatest gridders in the land.

Ruth Tells How to Treat Sprains And Strains in Baseball

DR. PAINTER APPLYING BANDAGE TO SUPPOSEDLY SPRAINED ANKLE. NOTICE BANDAGE BEING APPLIED AS FIGURE 8 AND WRAPPED TIGHTLY TO GIVE ANKLE PERFECT SUPPORT, YET BEING LEFT OPEN AT HEEL AND JOINT TO PERMIT OF MOVEMENT.

By BABE RUTH,
Baseball's Highest Salaried Player.

Here's Doc Painter, our trainer, giving Mac the lowdown on the most common and at the same time the most dangerous of all kid injuries—sprains and strains.

There's no need telling how these injuries are incurred. Most kids know. Slipping, turning an ankle, making a bad slide—any one of a thousand different things may bring them. And since they are purely accidental, there's no rule for avoiding them for kids who like to play and play hard. So the thing to consider is treatment. Here are a few rules:

In any case of strain or sprain, the first thing is an ice pack. Get the ice pack on the injury just as soon as possible and keep it there. If it's a severe strain or sprain those cold applications should continue for 24 hours, with the patient entirely quiet and restful. After the first 24 hours, an alternate application of hot and cold is advisable.

In case of a minor strain, put on the hot applications for a time then work the injury lightly, but always under bandages. Naturally, the bandage is important on all strains and sprains and the sooner it is placed there the better.

With sprains or strains there is very likely to be severe swelling. The ice pack, followed by the hot and cold applications, is beneficial in reducing swelling and inflammation. Even in case of severe swelling it is advisable to bandage immediately and tightly before applying the ice. If the injury continues to swell the bandage can be loosened from time to time for comfort, but it always should be kept on.

Bandaging sprains isn't always easy. Frequently they are hard to get to and hard to wrap. In putting on a bandage, always remember that the idea of a bandage is to support the injured members without hampering movement. Too many people think a bandage should be put on so as to stop all motion and make an injured joint rigid. That's wrong. If the joint needs to be kept right, then a splint is used—or a hard bandage—but a soft bandage is only to give support and at the same time permit movement.

In the picture, Doc Painter is applying a figure 8 bandage to a supposedly sprained ankle. Notice that the bandage is being wrapped tightly to give the ankle perfect support, yet is being left open at the heel and joint to permit of movement. That's the idea with all bandages.

In sprains and strains, as in other injuries, it is important to give treatment as soon as possible, and always see a reputable trainer or physician. More youngsters are permanently injured through treatment by bungling amateurs or home remedies than you would imagine. And remember, too, particularly as concerns youngsters, that their bones and muscles and tendons are undeveloped and an injury that an adult could throw off quickly may, if not properly cared for, result in permanent harm through malformation, distortion or improper healing.

CAPACITY RATE FOR FOSTER WHEELER

Hundred Per Cent Plant Operation Forecasts New Profit Record for Year

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Foster Wheeler Corporation continues to operate at plant capacity, and indications are that the final six months will result in earnings at least equal to those reported for the first half this year. On this basis, net income would approximate $2,150,000, after all charges, including taxes and depreciation.

Such net would be equal to better than $8.50 a share on the present outstanding common of 236,449 no-par shares, allowing for dividends on the slightly more than 19,200 shares of $7 preferred still issued. The number of shares outstanding at December 31, next, however, probably will show a change incident to additional conversions of preferred into common, which will have a corresponding effect upon the estimated per share earnings.

BACKLOG LARGER

Against all of 1929 when net income amounted to $1,617,347, the record, the estimated total for this year would show a gain of better than 30 per cent. Last year's net income was equal to $6.05 a share on 231,055 shares of common stock, after preferred dividend payments.

A factor conducive to favorable earnings in the current half year is the $10,720,757 of unfilled business carried over on July 1, last. This was an increase of 63 per cent over the $6,579,563 backlog on July 1, 1929, and a gain of more than 15 per cent compared with January 1, last, when unfilled business amounted to $9,300,000.

SURPLUS UP 50 PER CENT

Consequent upon the betterment in net income in the first six months this year, Foster Wheeler's liquid financial status also has been improved against the end of 1929. On the latter date current assets were equal to $4.70 for each $1 of current liabilities. Working capital amounted to $5,409,564, an increase of $1,340,118, or more than 30 per cent over the total at the end of 1928.

Cash and marketable securities aggregated $1,263,862, an increase of $829,078 over the total of December 31, 1928. Surplus of $3,502,573 at the end of 1929, was an increase of 50 per cent over a year earlier.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

ACTUAL FACTS ON CONDITIONS TODAY

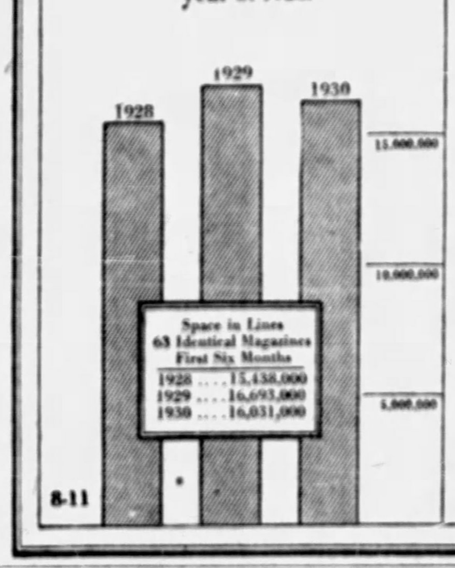
By FRELING FOSTER

National Advertising Lineage High

National advertising lineage in magazines and newspapers during the first half of 1930 is compared with the corresponding lineage in 1928 and 1929. Magazine figures, covering 63 identical periodicals, are from Printer's Ink. Newspaper figures, covering 50 identical cities, are from Media Records.

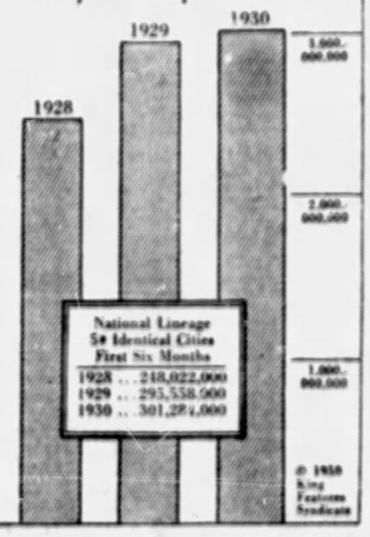
MAGAZINE ADVERTISING

Space used in 63 magazines—37 general, 16 women's and 10 weeklies—during the first half of 1930 shows a 4% decrease from 1929, but a 4% increase over the excellent year of 1928.



NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

National lineage shows a 2% gain over 1929 and a 21% gain over 1928. And this is the space bought by the big manufacturers (not the local retail shops) who were hit hardest by the depression.



YALE & TOWNE EARNINGS SLUMP

First-Half Net Equal to 32 Cents a Share Against $2.71 in Like 1929 Period

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Severity of the decline in building activity since last fall is well demonstrated in the statement of Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company for the three months ended June 30, wherein are revealed net profits of $24,140, against $619,209 for the like period of last year. These earnings are equivalent to five cents a share for the June, 1930, quarter on 486,656 shares, against $1.41 on 440,000 shares in the June quarter of 1929. For the first half of 1930 per share earnings were only 32 cents, compared with $2.71 for the corresponding half of last year. Ordinarily the June quarter is somewhat better than the March period.

LEADER IN FIELD

The company is the world's largest producer of builders' hardware. Its plants have been operating at a satisfactory pace up to the stock market break of last fall. Last year, incidentally, was the second largest for the company, with net profits totaling $2,585,000 against record net of $2,890,000 in 1923.

Profits of Yale & Towne have been fairly uniform for years, up to the present. The company (and subsidiaries) now operate six plants in the United States, one in Canada, two in England, six in Germany and one in Czechoslovakia. Although the present industrial depression is worldwide, Yale & Towne's overseas plants are operating at a better rate than those in this country.

FINE DIVIDEND RECORD

Yale & Towne has an almost unbroken dividend record of 50 years. Since 1923, when the old $100 par stock was split four-to-one, the present stock has received $4 annually and in addition in each year except 1928, an "extra" of $1 a share has been paid. With the July 1 payment, Yale & Towne has paid $3 per share this year.

At the close of 1929 the company had current assets of $15,701,054, of which cash and marketable securities accounted for $3,299,178, compared with current obligations of $2,073,727.

Natural Gas Expansion To Continue

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THE NATURAL GAS industry has shown the greatest development in its history in spite of the general industrial recession.

E. G. Diefenbach, president of G. E. Barrett & Co., and American Utilities and General Corporation, in reviewing the recent developments in the gas industry pointed to the fact that, while most other lines operated at reduced capacity and awaited signs of a generally expected business improvement, natural gas leaders went ahead with major construction developments involving the expenditure of approximately $175,000,000 and extending over more than 3,000 miles of right of way.

Line to Chicago Planned

THESE NEW NATURAL gas projects on which work is actually under way include a large pipe line system to Chicago and another to Eastern Nebraska and Central Iowa. Extensions from one of these lines eventually may be constructed to Milwaukee, according to Diefenbach. These important new undertakings have marked the entry into the natural gas field of some of the most powerful public utility interests of the country who previously were inclined to await its developments to more stabilized levels.

Orders for these thousands of miles of natural gas pipe lines, as well as others for similar large-diameter pipe to be used for transportation of oil and gasoline, have provided the principal encouragement afforded the steel industry thus far this year. Within the past few weeks orders have been booked for more than 500,000 tons of pipe of the electric-welded and seamless varieties. A number of the leading steel companies with large tube-making facilities have been working three shifts to supply the demand and some plants can fill no further pipe orders for the balance of the year. This expansion also has meant greatly increased business for manufacturers of gas compressors and other pipe line equipment.

Industry in New Stage

THE NATURAL GAS industry now is in the stage through which the electric power industry passed in the year following the war in the opinion of Diefenbach. It faces the problem of consolidating its tremendous developments of recent years through the building up of stronger units to stabilize its activities, insure better domestic service and fill increasing industrial requirements.

Those strongly identified with the natural gas and oil industries now are confident that within a few years most towns of 10,000 population or more in 36 states will be supplied with natural gas. Remaining potential markets are fast being taken up by the stronger units of the industry. With vast new sources of gas supply still being discovered and better conserved, the fear of exhausting natural gas reserves in the next few decades is gradually becoming displaced by the conviction held by the most competent geologists that our gas reserves are adequate for many years to come.

NEW FINANCING DECREASES

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—The mid-year decline in amount of new capital, including refunding, raised by home and foreign corporations, which began in June, continued with the July total, the smallest so far this year. Public utility offerings were more than half of the month's total, thus further increasing their lead over the other groups.

Leading the July total were 16 corporate items of $10,000,000 or more, compared with 13 in June and 20 in July last year. Total individual offerings from $500,000 up were 54, the second lowest in 10 years, comparing with 82 in June, 148 in July, 1929, and 41 last November. Amount going into refunding or refinancing approximated $76,174,000, against $75,863,000 in June and $55,269,000 in July, 1929.

Bonds, notes and stock offered by domestic and foreign rail, public utility, industrial and miscellaneous corporations in July, 1930, totaled $431,552,000, compared with $557,426,495 in June and with $925,511,4000 in July a year ago.

Good Repair Freight Cars Total Lower

Class I railroads on July 22 had 463,605 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, according to the American Railway Association. This was a decrease of 8,345 compared with July 14.

Class I railroads of this country on July 15 had 8,475 locomotives in need of repair or 15.2 per cent of the number on line, according to the American Railway Association. This was an increase of 509 locomotives compared with the number in need of repair on July 1, when there were 7,966 or 14.3 per cent.

Russia Orders Five More Generators

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Five more Hydro-Electric Generators described as the world's largest, will be added by the Soviet Government to the four machines now under construction at the Schenectady, N. Y., plant of the General Electric Company. One of the machines will be constructed entirely at the Schenectady plant and the other four will be manufactured jointly in Schenectady and in Russia, with assembly of the units in Russia. The generators are rated at 77,500 kilovolt amperes each, and compare with those at Niagara Falls rated at 65,000 kilovolt amperes each. They are for the Dnieper river development in the Ukraine.

July Department Store Sales Off

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Department store sales in July were 9 per cent smaller than in the corresponding month a year ago, according to preliminary reports to the federal reserve system by 519 stores located in leading cities of all federal reserve districts. Sales during the first seven months of this year were 5 per cent below the level of a year ago.

Pneumatic Tool To Recall Help

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—The Chicago Pneumatic Tool Company has received an order for 19 large gas engines. The new business will result in the return of several hundred men to work.

STAR INJURED IN POLO TEST

PORT WASHINGTON, N. Y., Aug. 11.—(AP.)—Despite fresh injury to their youthful No. 2, Earle A. S. Hopping, who fell under his pony in the seventh period, Capt. Tommy Hitchcock'c white-clad varsity poloists spotted the "Reds" an eight-goal handicap and beat them yesterday by the narrow margin of 14 to 13, in one of the most exciting tests yet held for the American international team.

Hopping, who only returned to the saddle last Wednesday after a two weeks' lay-off due to a previous fall, narrowly escaped serious injury. His pony, caroming off an opposing mount, lost its balance in turning, both mount and rider going down in a swirl of dust. The animal partially pinned Hopping down as it rolled over but the young player extricated himself quickly and jumped to his feet. Hopping's right side and leg were bruised and his right elbow cut but after a short rest he returned to the saddle.

The "Whites," as they took the field yesterday, with Pedley, Hopping, Hitchcock and Guest, presented a 24-goal lineup that many critics believed will be the combination to face the British challenge in September for the international cup. On the "flat," it outscored the "Reds" 14 to 5, but it took some sharpshooting by Pedley, plus some fine defensive work by Guest and Hitchcock, to overcome the stubborn resistance put up by the "jayvees," especially by J. Chever Cowdin, the veteran No. 3, and Elmer Roeseke, playing back.

GOLF
As Champions Play It

What points should a player consider in selecting a mashie that will suit his style of play?

Answered by JOHN BLACK.

In selecting a mashie the player should pay particular attention to the lay of the club. The mashie should rest on the heel and have the point of the club clear of the ground. If you select a mashie that is too flat and which rests on the point when you make the stroke, the point will catch the ground, the club will turn in your hands and the ball will go off to the right. Care should be taken in regard to the loft. Do not select a mashie with too much loft or you will be forcing the stroke to get the distance. The shaft should be stiff and not too thick so that you can feel the head of the club. The weight of the club should be about 13 ounces.

Nick Altrock Says:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—If your Uncle Nick is going to take part in the World Series this autumn I guess it will be from a nice warm seat in the press box. Those Athletics have got the pennant sewed up and from now on they are just embroidering it. The Washington club can beat out any ball team, but those A's are a power trust. I don't see how any outfit can trim them until the A's are split up four for one. The real crucial series is this week when the Brooklyns arrive in Chicago. If you missed seeing the battle of Gettysburg, this will be just as good.

'Synthetic Bullishness' Given as Cause for Present Slump

A market letter describes stocks as suffering on the current decline from the "synthetic bullishness" generated a few weeks ago when a sudden outburst of bullish activity, coinciding with the return of a prominent leader of the bull forces, injected new life into the market for a time. Many traders were frankly skeptical of that attempt to move the market upwards, largely at the expense of the short interest which had been built up in the May and June decline. "Hand made," "man made" and similar descriptions were applied to it freely. Failure of the bull party to hold the ground won on the July advance has brought out a new crop of bears and, judging from comments in market letters, many observers won over by the July recovery to the bull side have resigned themselves to the prospect that the market will go considerably lower.

Strength in the bond market during the past few days contrasted sharply with irregularity in stocks, reversing the condition that prevailed a year ago. Prices of investment bonds have advanced steadily on narrow volume, with many rails and high-grade utilities making new highs with consistent regularity. As it is, insurance companies and banks that bought bonds earlier in the year find themselves "on the ground floor" while those that buy later may pay substantially higher prices. Bond men agree that there are still many bargains for the individual investor, who can afford to choose lower priced issues of the smaller companies.

Pointing to expansion in the oil industry which has entailed an increased investment now more than $12,000,000,000, E. B. Reeser, president of the American Petroleum Institute and of the Barnsdall Corporation, adduces statistics to show that profits to oil companies have not been exorbitant. The average yearly return on aggregate net worth of 31 principal oil companies for the 13-year period 1913 to 1925, Mr. Reeser states, was 11.5 per cent and weighted average taking into account increase in net worth year by year was only 9.9 per cent.

Instead of feeling completely discouraged over the fresh downturn in the principal trading stocks, many experienced observers feel that this development contains strong elements of hopefulness regarding the market outlook over the remainder of the year. These authorities argue that while the July attempts to discount autumn trade acceleration were undertaken in a laudable spirit they were premature.

The futility of attempting to recommend a list of stocks for "safe speculative profits" is evidenced by the sharp downward movements which take place from time to time. A decline like that of Friday, in which sterling shares like U. S. Steel, American Can and Westinghouse drop off 3 to 10 points, wipes out in an hour or two the effects of a two-weeks' upward move. Paper profits at such times are as fleeting as the will o' the wisp and of little avail, either as margin in a trading account or as equities in a personal balance sheet.

U. S. Steel was a leader in the downward move on Friday, with a net loss of 5½ points and American Can lost 6 points. Damage to corn and fruit is expected to cause a shrinkage in the season's packing industry, which will be directly reflected in a decline in the demand for cans and containers. Steel mill operations declined 3 per cent last week, but one shrinkage does not make a depression any more than one swallow makes a summer. Those who place their wages with the heads of the steel corporation are "playing" the best judgment of the best business leaders the world has ever known, but that is no reason why the stock should not be bought cheaper, if available. If "steel" earns $6.46 in the second half of the year, as it did in the first half, with business on the mend on December 31, the stock is not much over-priced at current levels.

OUTPUT OF PIPE MILLS GAINS

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 11.—Steel companies continue production schedules in the Mahoning Valley for the week at 58 to 60 per cent. Of 51 independent open hearth furnaces, 24 are melting. Steel corporation subsidiaries in the area average 55 per cent.

Strip and sheet steel production is slightly under 50 per cent, while tin mills are averaging less than 60 per cent, which represents a decline.

Pipe mill output steps up to 70 per cent. Republic Steel Corporation has only one idle unit in its tubular department.

Independent steel bar mills average 50 per cent, and similar mills of the Steel Corporation 60 per cent.

Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company averages 55 per cent, against 65 per cent for Republic Steel. Sharon Steel Hoop averages 60 per cent.

Mahoning Valley Steel Company resumed with seven mills Sunday, but all Mahoning Valley properties of Empire Steel Corporation, Mansfield, are inactive.

A. M. Byers Company operates its Ohio properties at Girard at 60 per cent.

General Fireproofing Company and Truscon Steel Company average 85 per cent to 90 per cent, and fabrications in general in this area report betterment in their operations.

STOCK MARKET GENERALLY HEAVY

List Turns Down After Bull Attempt to Hold Up Share Prices Fails

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—(AP.)—The stock market was generally heavy in the early hours today. A hurried selling movement began late in the forenoon after prices had shown inability to assimilate the professional liquidation and realizing that followed efforts to maintain an upward trend by advancing a few industrials 2 to 5 points.

Losses of 2 to 3 points in American Telephone, Canadian Pacific, Southern Railway, Missouri Pacific, J. I. Case, National Biscuit and Air Reduction had developed toward midday. The market was dull during the early irregularity, but trading quickened slightly as the decline assumed more definiteness.

Call money renewed at 2 per cent.

The fairly steady opening soon caused extensive covering by shorts who had looked for further liquidation, and early losses were largely regained at the end of the first half hour, while a score or more of issues showed net advances of about 1 to 2 points. Trading was rather light.

Although the week-end reviews from the steel industry were not very encouraging, the gain of about 54,000 tons in United States Steel's backlog of orders at least indicated that cancellations had not been as extensive during July as feared. Moderate relief from the drought and extremely hot weather in some areas also had a favorable influence on speculative sentiment.

American Can, Consolidated Gas, Case and Auburn Auto sold up more than 2 points, and stocks gaining a point or more included Bethlehem, North American, Transamerican, Eastman, Byers, Southern Railway, Lackawanna, Loews and Foster Wheeler. U. S. Steel and General Electric soon showed fractional advances. National Biscuit was heavy, losing 2.

Before the market turned upward, Worthington and Case each lost more than 2 and Air Reduction, Warner Bros., American Telephone, duPont, Allis Chalmers and Goodyear sold off a point or more.

Foreign exchanges were inclined to ease, with sterling cables opening at $4.87 3-16, off 1-16.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 11—Widespread lower temperatures, together with good rains in parts of the corn belt, lead to sharp setbacks in prices early today for wheat and corn. Prospects that the government crop report this afternoon would show bearish as to wheat tended also to bring increased selling, whereas expectance of bullish official figures on the corn crop apparently had been discounted. Opening unchanged to 1¼c off, wheat later underwent an all around drop, corn started at ½c decline to ½c advance and afterward showed a general fall.

Traders in the corn market today appeared to be attaching special weight to a report from a leading unofficial crop expert who has just returned from a 2,000-mile tour of the corn belt, and who said that in most of Iowa and in Northern Illinois the corn crop is still promising a yield not far below average. On the other hand, he said that in Southern Illinois, in Missouri and in Southeast Kansas he found the corn crop to have suffered more from heat and drought than he had ever witnessed before in 42 years' traveling through North American grain belts.

Breaks in wheat values today were accompanied by general selling that in numerous cases appeared to be of a stop-loss character. Price rallies, which were brisk at times, resulted largely from buying here ascribed to houses with European connections. Oats went lower with wheat and corn.

Provisions reflected grain weakness, despite steady quotations on hogs.

WALL STREET HEARS

That market sponsors of American home products feel it is selling out of line with other drug issues, and look for higher prices as soon as the present market situation clears up.

That some important traders are concerned over the fact that many of the utilities and some of the popular industrials and specialties are still selling at 25 times earnings or higher, feeling that substantial correction may be necessary.

That many Wall street observers are pessimistic about the benefit likely to result from a diminishing of crop yields by the drought, for the damage to the two crops in which the supply is most excessive—wheat and cotton—seems to have been moderate.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—The curb market steadied materially today and then turned bull. After an irregular opening, there were intermittent flurries of short selling, but the small declines brought out little stock and the professional liquidating movement was not present with the result that trading slipped back into the familiar rut of recent weeks.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded in (000 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list):

BUSINESS GAIN HELD LIKELY FOR FALL

Seasonal Trend at Least Will Present Favorable Factor; Drought Handicap

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Midsummer dullness, intensified by excessive heat and drought, has furnished no proper background for bulling the stock market. Accordingly, by the end of last week, it was apparent the artificial support had been withdrawn, and the market became vulnerable to the tactics of professional traders for the decline.

Shrinking individual bank debits reflect the unsatisfactory character of present trade. Traders in stocks are subject to occasional fits of pessimism when they compare present realities with earlier forecasts. And yet the sagacious who put themselves in cash last summer before the bull market collapsed, recognized the unwisdom of becoming aggressively bearish when all the bad news is out.

Mr. Rukeyser

SOME GAIN DUE IN FALL

The real issue is when the turn in business will come. Some conservative financiers prefer to await evidence from the business situation itself.

There still appears to be no reason to doubt that seasonal factors at least will make for some pickup in the autumn. Next spring, when consumers get another opportunity to decide whether to start building homes and buying automobiles, business may be still more vigorously stimulated. Business is now in the trough, and the next major phase of the cycle is likely to be toward recovery. Yet prudence indicates the hazard of expecting premature results.

The drought emphasizes the difference between man-made troubles, such as those resulting from the business cycle, and troubles meted out by the caprice of nature.

PRESIDENT AT BEST

In inviting governors of the stricken areas to meet at the White House next Thursday to discuss co-ordinated plans, President Hoover was at his best. He has a rare talent for organizing for relief. As the Chief Executive pointed out:

"The situation is one to cause a great deal of concern, but it must be borne in mind that the drought has mainly affected animal food, the bulk of the direct human food production of the country being abundantly in hand."

The destruction of corn is likely to lead to the use of wheat for cattle feed, and thus help to reduce the excessive supply of cereals. In a sense, the drought, in bringing a new equilibrium between supply and demand, constitutes farm relief, but it proceeds blindly and chaotically and bestows its benefits unevenly. The stricken areas, with production effaced, cannot benefit from such higher prices as may result. Mr. Hoover estimates that approximately 1,000,000 farm families dwell in the stricken area.

MORE SERIOUS MENACE

The drought emphasizes that such visitations from nature constitute a much more serious matter than cyclical business recession. The latter has to do only with changing levels of prosperity, whereas a drought theoretically at least could bring starvation to large sections of the population.

The railroads, already hard hit in earning power by the recession, will ask the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to lower rates for shipping in feed to the stricken areas. Apart from the considerations of humanity involved, the railroads recognize the wisdom of making present sacrifices in order to keep economic life going in the great agricultural regions on which they depend for traffic.

BUILDING PERMITS GAIN

One favorable straw in the wind was the fact that in July building permits showed a gain over June, according to reports to Bradstreet's from 170 cities. Permits for July aggregated $146,640,187, compared with $138,412,000 in June. Substantial improvement in residential building and in automobile sales would be primary factors in causing recovery, which would have secondary repercussions in most other trades.

In these days when minus signs are so common in the financial markets, it is encouraging to learn from the census bureau that the population of the United States has gone up. The growth has, of course, been checked by restricted immigration, and, though in time of unemployment there is added sentiment for such a policy, it is an open question whether it is successful. If the United States imported more population within its tariff lines, it would have a still larger domestic market to absorb the product of its industries.

Improved Tone In Soft Coal Demand

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Accompanied by a marked advance in the price level of domestic sizes, trading in the nation's bituminous coal markets during the past month reflected a somewhat improved tone, Coal Age reports. Price advances scheduled for August indicated the buying movement in those markets where betterment was apparent. Retailers bought to cover themselves, rather than from the fact that they were selling any coal to their customers. Steam business continued to languish.

MOTOR STEEL PICKUP DUE

CLEVELAND, Aug. 11.—Several structural steel fabricators in the Chicago district are reducing operations with demand light and new inquiry limited, according to Daily Metal Trade. Inquiry in outlying territory is fair. At Philadelphia plate demand is coming out steadily, but is not sufficient to enable mills in the district to operate above 6[illegible] per cent of capacity. Small reinforcing bar tonnages are being placed right along.

Little new business has come out as yet from automobile lines, but producers are confident of a pickup before the end of the month.

SUNDAY BAN ON FREE MOVIES

STEUBENVILLE, O., Aug. 11.—Another attempt to lift the blue law ban on movies here failed last night when Mayor Oliver Conley sent a squad of police to the Olympic Theater to stop a show and disperse an audience of Legionnaires, their families and friends.

Halting of the performance, a pre-view of "All Quiet on the Western Front," with no admission charge for an invited guest list, was protested by the Warner Brothers management and American Legion on the grounds there was no law violation in a private party.

Mayor Conley held the courts in settling the recent fight on the blue law ban here, had held any operation of moving pictures on Sunday a violation and closed the house. No arrests were made.

The blaze was at the home of Samuel Grubb, near Silver Spring, but it had gained such headway before neighbors noticed that the house was practically destroyed when the firemen arrived.

SET TO RESUME TOKIO FLIGHT

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 11.—(INS.)—Robert B. Wark and Edward L. Brown, Tacoma to Tokio fliers, planned to take off here today in their Fokker monoplane for White Horse, Yukon Territory, their first scheduled refueling stop after being forced down last night by airbound gasoline lines.

The pilots declared upon landing at Ladner Field, five miles from Vancouver, that their craft, except for the minor difficulty that compelled their descent, was in perfect condition for the 5,400-mile flight to Tokio. The first leg of the journey, from Tacoma to White Horse, is approximately 1,200 miles.

Before taking off at the Tacoma airport, Wark said the present refueling flight was in preparation for a non-stop flight across the Pacific to the Japanese capital, next summer. He had planned such a flight this year, but numerous obstacles compelled him to postpone the venture.

Wark and Brown expect their present flight to consume about 60 hours, which would land them in Tokio Tuesday night, barring delays. They declared, however, they would not hesitate to land at intermediate points if bad weather is encountered.

Fine Mural Paintings Found Hidden by Whitewash

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 11.—(Universal)—Twelve merry Franciscan Friars, whom the world had forgotten, have come to life through discovery, under coats of whitewash in the Monastery of Huejotzingo, near here, of a number of fine sixteenth century murals.

The work is that of an unknown artist who knew both line and color. The principal painting shows the 12, often referred to as the "Evangelizers of New Spain," on their knees adoring the Cross. Another depicts the washing of the feet, and a third, Saint Paul, sword in hand, upholding a replica of the monastery.

Huejotzingo was for many years the seat of the faith in Mexico. It was begun about 1550. The murals appear to have been painted after 1574, when the 12 friars or padres arrived. Like all early buildings in Mexico, this boasts of tremendous walls, immune alike to weather and earthquakes.

The theory is that the paintings were whitewashed over about 1859, to protect them from the iconoclasts who became active following the separation of church and state. The monastery, deserted since, has suffered much at the hands of vandals.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Ancient Joke

Mr. Ichabod Pfessing shoved back his chair from the dinner table.

"Well, I am all set for my annual outing," he remarked, blandly.

He beamed a little.

Mr. Pfessing was in the habit of beaming a great deal. He was a man difficult to disturb, blessed with contentment under circumstances that would be rasping to many others.

His son, Harold, looked across at his daughter, Hester, and winked; that is, Harold looked at his sister, Mr. Pfessing's daughter.

Hester grinned and looked at her mother.

Mrs. Pfessing said: "That's nice, we'll enjoy having you at the Owl's Head Inn we have made so many summer friends there and they've never seen you."

"Owl's Head Inn? Oh, that place where you and the babies go every summer!

"Why not let up on the 'babies' line, Pop, seeing that I'm 20 and Sis is a year older—"

"Younger!" shrilled Hester.

"Oh, all right—have it that way, I forgot. I know you used to be a year older when we were kids, but the idea is it sounds rather funny for Pop to always be calling us 'Babies.'"

"Certainly, the Owl's Head Inn, Ichabod. You know that for 14 years the children and I have been there and you have never gone with us. Last fall, if you remember, I put my foot down and said that next season you'd go with us, dress like a gentleman, eat like a civilized person and keep whole and healthy."

"Good speech, Ma," Harold said.

"I recollect that you said something like that last fall, Emmy. You've been saying it every fall. But, of course, I couldn't give up my two weeks camping."

Family Quarrels

"You're too old, Pa, to be sleeping in a tent and eating cinders with half boiled potatoes and ants in the sugar and—"

"Cutting your foot with an ax," Harold interrupted his sister.

"And getting a severe cold and spraining your back and coming home cut and burned and blistered and sick enough to go to bed for a month," his wife finished.

"Trivial things, compared with the thrill of camping out on the shore of some quiet lake, communing with nature, my dear," Mr. Pfessing remarked blandly.

Mrs. Pfessing snorted.

"Communing with snakes and hoot-owls and mosquitoes, you mean."

"I enjoy it, Emmy."

"No, you don't, you're just stubborn. You think you are a boy again, you think you can stand it the way you did years ago, and it's the same old ancient joke."

"Ancient joke, Emmy?"

"Certainly. You've been reading in the funny papers for years about the miserable hardships of camping, you've seen funny pictures of campers having their tent blown away in a rain and getting choked with the campfire smoke and being chased by bulls—"

"And sleeping on poison ivy and cutting your foot with an ax," daughter Hester put in.

"To say nothing of falling out of a boat and catching nothing but a few measly sun fish and dropping the bacon in the sand," Harold finished.

"One lives and learns, my dear. Each season I perfect my arrangements more and more. This year there won't be a hitch."

"But you really can't be thinking of going camping again, Ichabod," his wife protested, almost tearfully.

"I have been thinking of it since August 15, last year."

"That's when you got home," Hester reminded him.

Mr. Pfessing beamed at his daughter. "Quite right, my dear—I've been thinking of my next campaign ever since."

"But, Ichabod, this year it is important that you go to Owl's Head Inn with us. You know very well that Mr. Darlington will be there as usual with his family."

"I see Mr. Darlington every day except Sunday, month in and month out—it will be no treat for me to see him on my vacation."

Intends to Camp

"It isn't that. It's the good it will do you. You get along wonderfully with men, you play clever bridge and you are an entertaining talker. You could get in the good graces of Mr. Darlington and he'd appreciate you more in the office and push you ahead instead of promoting young squirts over your head right along."

Ichabod Pfessing squirmed at this, for it was largely true. His wife noted the effect of her words on him and tried to push the argument to a winning conclusion.

"You'd get chummy with him up at the Inn, and it would mean a whole lot to you. Mr. Darlington wouldn't think of you as just an automaton in the office."

Mr. Pfessing got up and went to the smoking stand, where he thoughtfully filled his pipe, lighted it, and sat in the old red velvet Morris chair.

"I'm starting next Saturday morning for Chain of Ponds," he announced, calmly.

"We wish you luck, pop; you'll need it," Harold said.

"Why not give Ma a square deal, Father, and come along—"

Hester got no further. Mr. Pfessing ceased beaming. He put down his paper, uncrossed his legs and sat up.

Mr. Pfessing resumed his pipe and paper.

Mrs. Pfessing was very much peeved; not so much because her husband wouldn't join the veranda-squatters with her at the Owl's Head Inn as because he was going to have his own way another summer, and when anyone didn't agree with her, she was always upset because she knew that she was always right; hence all opposition must be wrong.

"Every year she said bitterly, 'Your father experiences that ancient joke of camping out. Every year he gets sick and hurt and run down. Now this year he won't even do as I ask when it is a matter of policy for all of us. If he would come with us he would chum around with Mr. Darlington, his boss, and get in right. But no, he's got to live in a wet tent and sleep on the damp ground and eat cinders and ants with what little food he can scrape together, he's got to get messed up with fishing and poison weeds and sharp axes—that's why I call it an ancient joke—greenhorn campers always act like that."

Experienced Camper

Mr. Pfessing started to ignore her remarks, but the last crack she made about his being a greenhorn camper was too much.

"I'm an experienced camper. And this year my outfit is perfect. I have a good time. I know the woods and the ponds and there's no summer hotel or flock of hotels that can offer anything half so good as camping."

"Oh, yes? Well, Ichabod Pfessing, I'm disappointed in you and ashamed. Where's your ambition? You'll miss getting friendly with Mr. Darlington, your boss, you'll get all bunged up with your crazy camping and you'll plod along in a rut all your life," Mrs. Pfessing said, sharply.

Mr. Pfessing smiled at her.

"I've sent my new outfit ahead to Robinson's landing," he said, quietly.

Mrs. Pfessing said no more—until they had retired. She said plenty then. Mr. Pfessing made no reply or comment until she had talked more than an hour, then he said, "They've stocked Upper Pond with square-tails, you know, for five years, and this is the first season it is permissible to fish there. It will be great sport."

Mrs. Pfessing and the children left next day for Owl's Head Inn. Mr. Pfessing left for his solo camping trip on schedule.

When his two weeks were up Mrs. Pfessing telephoned home, but there was no reply.

She telephoned every day after that for a week, with the same result. She was worried. Mr. Darlington hadn't come at all, she feared he had to give up his vacation because Mr. Pfessing was away so long, she feared Mr. Pfessing had lost his job, she feared—ad lib.

"Hello, there," he said to Mrs. Pfessing. "Mr. Pfessing asked me to tell you that he was home and on the job; we got back day before yesterday and I put him in as general manager, a job he should have had long ago, but I've made it up to him, all right. He's a modest chap, and you are certainly a modest wife—you never told me he was a champion veteran camper."

"Er—er—no, Mr. Darlington," Mrs. Pfessing stammered.

"I ran across him at Upper Pond. I'd had the devil's own luck, hard luck, and he took me into his camp—neat as wax, dry and warm, and the meals he cooked were marvelous—but his biggest glory is his fishing ability—I believe he could coax a trout out of a bucket of water. Well, sir, he and I stayed together for three weeks—I never had so much fun, never caught so many fish, and never met such a genuine he-pal for camp as Ike Pfessing."

Praises Ichabod

"Why—yes, Ichabod has been camping for a good many years."

"And how! There's a keen, able man for you—the way to know a man is to live alone with him in a tent for a few weeks. I'm going to make him vice president of our concern when I get back."

When Mrs. Pfessing and the children returned, Mr. Pfessing met them with a brand new car. He was beaming more than ever. The house had been painted and the grounds fixed up by a landscape gardener.

"My dear," said Mrs. Pfessing, "just what did Mr. Darlington give you to make it up to you—he said—"

"A mere trifle—I've invested ten thousand of it. Say, we had a wonderful camping—"

"Ten thousand! Invested it? We need new clothes and new furniture and—"

"Darlington's an amateur but he learned quickly. I tell you we thoroughly enjoyed that ancient joke."

"What ancient joke?" Mrs. Pfessing asked, suspiciously.

"Your ancient joke about how I nearly kill myself camping every year."

"Why Ichabod Pfessing, I always said you were an expert camper, I fairly urged you to go this year. How much of that ten thousand can you spare me?"

"We caught 15 square-tails in one day—"

And so it goes, even now. Every time Mrs. Pfessing asks about sparing her some of the extra money Mr. Pfessing tells her some incident of his camping experiences.

NEXT QUESTION, PLEASE

"On one occasion Clara Bow remained in her dressing room, holding up production, until the director became alarmed. Gaining admittance, he found Miss Bow in a depressed mood. 'What is it all about,' she asked. The afternoon was spent in a discussion of philosophy."—Film Fan Magazine.

Just why we're here is difficult
To answer or explain,
For all we know is what we hear
And what we hear is not quite clear,
Logicians hit and miss, my dear,
Their meaning's not quite plain.

In fact, the only thing we know
Beyond a single doubt
Is we're born quite willy nilly,
Find it hot, or find it chilly—
Carry on quite sane or silly,
Then we flicker out.

Life by rule of creed or sect
Insults the searching intellect;
While life set free and on the loose
Just doesn't work—so what's the use?

Voting Machine Delay Demands Explanation

The report that there is scarcely a chance that voting machines will be in use in Pittsburgh at the general election in November is a keen disappointment. Citizens had been led until lately to believe there was likelihood that hundreds of the devices would have been procured by that time, and that there was a possibility of enough to supply the greater part of the county. Now we are told that, thanks to the dilatory policy of the County Commissioners, we must abandon hope.

Clearly the Commissioners owe the people of Allegheny County an explanation for their failure to act on this matter in a prompt and businesslike way. Why was nothing said about it at the Commissioners' meeting on Friday? After long and careful study of the things essential to efficient voting machines, specifications were prepared, bids invited, and, on July 22, bids were opened. Why has the contract not been awarded?

The Commissioners have tried the patience of the voters sorely by ignoring the Town Hall mandate and by the interminable delay in the construction of the airport and the golf courses in the county parks. Must voting machines be added to the list of projects handled in an unsatisfactory manner? It is for Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong to answer.

River Traffic Continues Despite Adverse Factors

Has it been worth while to improve the rivers? Will we be safe in assuming that the rivers will be extensively used at all seasons and under all economic conditions? The severe test which the local waterways are now experiencing and the manner in which they are meeting it compel emphatic answers in the affirmative to both questions.

The drought has brought the water to the lowest level to which it has fallen in years. Up at Franklin, on the Allegheny, the official observer of the river stages had to place new marks on his gauge, because he had never anticipated that the stream would shrink to its present proportions.

Had the Ohio not been improved from Pittsburgh to Cairo with dams and locks, traffic would now be at a standstill. As it is, there has been no interference with navigation. Barges have had to be loaded a little less heavily, but that is the only way in which traffic has been affected by the drought.

Aside from the condition of the rivers it might have been expected that little use would be made of them now because of mid-summer dullness in the industries that ship most extensively by barge. Pittsburgh steel mills, for example, are operating at present at about 55 per cent of capacity.

Notwithstanding the current slackness, we note in the river news of the last few days such items as that the steamer Inland of the American Barge Line left Ambridge with a tow of 10 barges loaded with steel products, the steamer Monongahela left with its fifty-seventh tow of freight from Carnegie Steel Company plants for down-river points, and the steamer City of Pittsburgh passed Memphis on its way to New Orleans with a load of steel.

With the rivers meeting so successfully the tests of low water and an unfavorable economic situation, the outlook for continuous use of our proposed municipal river-rail terminals is brightened. The terminals might not be the losing venture that some of the critics of the project assert they will be.

There is encouragement for the Pittsburgh enterprise, also, in the news that Evansville, Ind., is arranging for the construction of a large river-rail terminal. It is hardly to be supposed that Evansville would engage in such an undertaking without confidence that it would be profitable. A city of Evansville's size can afford less than Pittsburgh to invest a large sum of money in a risky project.

Superstition Is Also Common in Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh Boy Scouts, just back from an Oregon Trail celebration in Wyoming, have brought with them an idol. It is a clay image of the Hopi Indians' rain god, to whom the benighted aborigines appeal with incantations in time of drought. The Pittsburgh boys are having fun undertaking, with mumbo-jumbo and abracadabra, to produce rain through the idol's instrumentality.

With good-natured condescension we smile at the superstition of the poor Indians who imagine they can be benefited by a thing of clay. But it ill behooves us to smile at the superstitions of others, least of all those who have not had the advantage of science and education.

Go into Pittsburgh's finest downtown hotels—skyscraper buildings representing in their construction and appointments the last word in engineering skill and artistic refinement. If asked to indicate something typical of our civilization we would point with pride to these hotels.

Enter the elevator of one of these hostelries and inquire for the thirteenth floor. You will find there is no such floor. There is a twelfth floor and a fourteenth, but no thirteenth. Ask for an explanation of the curious omission and the management will tell you so many people regard "13" with superstitious terror that if they were to give a floor that number its room would not be occupied!

Budapest Pays Gracious Tribute to Mayor Kline

While the honors that are being heaped on Mayor Charles H. Kline in Budapest are in the main a personal tribute, due to his reception of Hungarian officials who visited here several years ago, they may also properly be considered a friendly gesture of Hungary's capital to Pittsburgh—a gesture in which all of us should take satisfaction.

It was peculiarly appropriate that at the municipal banquet in Mayor Kline's honor he should be given a watch that had once belonged to Louis Kossuth, the Hungarian patriot.

Kossuth visited Pittsburgh in the fifties of the last century and was received with the greatest enthusiasm. Many Pittsburghers bought Hungarian bonds that were to be redeemed when Hungary attained its independence, and some of the bonds are still to be found here in the possession of the descendants of the buyers.

Thanks to Kossuth, Pittsburgh has always been interested in Hungary and her aspirations, and Kline has pleased a multitude of the citizens by including that country in his itinerary.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Adam's Apples

Seems that the movies have eliminated a great American industry. That's the growing of Adam's apples for the domestic trade.

"Bugs" Baer his neck like a mouse up a rope.

Visitors to our fair and otherwise shores always commented upon the protuberance. It seemed to be one of our manifestations of patriotism.

Yet, for a year we have been looking at our friends, strangers and visitors in an effort to discover a good, old-fashioned, key-winding Adam's apple.

Not one to be seen. Why? There was a time when they roved the plains in countless millions.

Washington, Lincoln, Grant and all our battling pioneers had 'em. And what is good enough for Washington should be surely good enough for Adolph Menjou, Lew Cody and John Gilbert.

We concede that sometimes they were the mark of advancing age and appeared accompanied by wattles and jowls. Now, we seem to be in an era in which nobody gets old.

What's happened to those neck jewels? They were beautiful solitares in their wrinkled settings.

You can't swallow 'em. You might for a minute but they jump right back. Ladies used to have 'em also. And we hardly think they can rub 'em out in a beauty parlor.

We are hoping that the 156-year-old Turk has one just so we can refresh the elusive memory. Come to think of it, Americans seem to be changing in habits, contour and general delivery.

Possibly the mechanical age has something to do with it. We are bracketed in luxury and saturated with wealth. We don't include last October in that happy calendar because during that bearish month our Adam's apples did show a little.

We may be growing into a race of supermen without blemishes or angles. We may yet become a nation of beautiful creatures who are all curves like a fever chart.

That would be delightful and everything would be perfect if Einstein would stop explaining theories and Tom Edison could cease asking those barbed wire questions.

Next picture we see of Lon Chaney we hope he shows us an Adam's apple that looks like a California plum. Then he can pose for the heroic statue of the evaporated pedestrian which has been indorsed by the society of divot replacers and which will occupy a commanding spot between two traffic jams.

THE FUTURE OF THE RACE

By Archibald Henderson

One of the great dreams which obsess the philosophers and scientists of today is the perfectibility of the human species. Is it possible for one man, by taking thought, to add one cubit to his stature? If we seek to produce more beautiful women, what assurance have we that they will not be "beautiful but dumb?" How shall we proceed, through scientific means, to develop, to evolve, a higher race of beings? What mighty potentialities, as yet undeveloped, lurk buried in the physiological organism of man?

These are questions which the eugenists, in recent years, have brought prominently to public attention. Nietzsche has said: "Not only onward shalt thou propagate thyself but upward." To this problem, the study of evolution thus far offers no practical solution. The evolutionist sees little room for any radical development of the human body. Progress in that direction seems to have ceased.

Scientists have discovered many survivals, inside the human body, which appear to serve no useful purpose.

Wiedersheim notes, among more than a hundred such vestiges, the functionless muscles of the ear, and the little fold of epithelium at the corner of the eye. Yet it is unwise to leap too hastily to the conclusion that certain parts of the human body are entirely useless, merely because we have not yet discovered the role which they actually play in the economy of human life.

Consider the tiny pineal gland, which until recently was regarded as an entirely useless affair, a survival from some exceedingly remote reptile ancestor. Yet recent discoveries show that it is an endocrinal gland with important functions. By means of the "pineal eye," it has recently been suggested by some scientist, it may ultimately develop the faculty of realizing imaginatively, as well as logically, the fourth dimension.

In response to the belief that the appendix was an entirely useless organ, innumerable people have had their appendixes removed. Distinguished scientists today recognize that the appendix is by no means an entirely useless organ. Nature is marvelously ingenious and economical. She succeeds somehow in putting vestigial organs to work and makes them perform useful functions in the human body.

Man is at the mercy of his genes, to put it scientifically. The inheritance of characters and evolutionary emergence of characters depend on genes.

Bateman goes so far as to say that "the hope that by change in the conditions of life or by any external influences significant alterations, whether of organisms amenable to experiment or of the human population, must be abandoned."

To date eugenics has accomplished little save in a negative or prohibitory direction. It is generally agreed that, in the present state of scientific knowledge, it would be folly to attempt to breed human beings for special features.

"If there were a central directing agency which had the power as well as the wisdom to control mating within the group," says Prof. Cattell, "something could undoubtedly be done slowly to elevate the general average of bodily vigor and innate power within the group. This could be done most rapidly by polygamy which would permit of a relatively rigid selection of sires; less rapidly under monogamy by a selection of parents among both sexes."

But for a slight and problematical racial gain, there would be an incalculable social and moral loss. The race must still depend upon the natural operation of sexual selection. "Cupid is a safer guide in matrimony than a licensing board."

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

In Hollywood there is an office where they get the manuscripts that people send in to make talkies out of. The manuscripts come in so fast that it keeps one young man busy just hauling them in in armfuls and hauling 'em out again after they've been looked at. A visitor from the East was looking around, and he happened to stand by the young manuscript-hauler when he was standing in the door with a big load in his arms.

"Say, Brother, don't all that load of stuff make you pretty tired?" he says.

"Nope," says Brother, "I ain't the guy that reads 'em!"

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

They've started a society of atheists among the summer students of the University of California. Well, what if they have?

We humans seem to be so constituted that we need to throw a spasm every now and then. A spasm during which we run amuck, raising Cain with the status quo. Of course, it's a frightful nuisance to the neighbors, but there's nothing abnormal nor permanently harmful about it. I suspect it's as natural as the tides and the seasons—that it is, in fact, a highly important period in our growth. For it's plain that the spirit which never rebels or doubts, questions or defies, doesn't amount to much.

And I think that's the reason for atheists. Too much perplexing about life fills them with fuss and fret. So, partly out of genuine bewilderment and partly because it magnifies their own importance, they take it out on God.

Nothing new about that. Down in the jungles of Africa, kinky headed savages are doing exactly the same thing. Every once in a while, they also get all wrought up. Daub themselves with clay—work themselves in a frenzy with the throb of the tom-toms—then dance about, making faces at God, telling Him in junglese that He's a piker.

And, while they dance, God moves serenely on His business all about them. They can't see Him, or be able to bear Him, if they could. But there He is—

There He is in the quickening light, about their mounting faces—

There He is in the sap pulsing through the trees and the thunder rolling through the sky—

There He is in the delicate, complicating veining of leaf—the tremendous buttressing of a mountain—engineering feats beyond the skill of any man—

There He is in the kinky headed savage themselves — in their dreams and their rebellions, in their hunger and their joy—working His inscrutable purposes, patterns and programs through their flesh and minds and spirits—

Yet the savages dance and dast Old Man God.

Let 'em! Do not worry about atheists, kinky headed or otherwise. If their outcries mean anything at all, they simply mean that they are full of stir and sap, which is a very good thing. And you need not fear that these outcries will fluster God. "God is not mocked" runs the old proverb, and that is as true on the university campus as in the halls of Solomon.

God is not mocked by atheists. He may even make atheists, protem, for the good of their circulation. And it is certain that His purposes and miracles will proceed in atheists as in all other men. He will make them fall in love, send them out on crusades and adventures. And He will walk by their side as they pass through loneliness and fear.

And often a clamor will arise in their hearts—like the beatings of wings against bars. A clamor for greater beauty and power and truth. And after a riot, they will find the answer and go on richer and stronger and, for the time, comforted. They will take credit to themselves for it all. They will not acknowledge that God sent the clamor and God made the answer. But what of it? As long as life goes on, does it matter what name we call it?

All men alike must go
On common soil.
Never alone, but part

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

And of these deaths, many more are of males than of females. Thus, increase of prenatal care and infant hygiene would soon reduce the surplusage of women over men.

SEC. 3. CONTROL OF SEX.

Now we may discuss the bearing of these facts on a much debated question. Is there at present any way of deciding what sex our children are going to be?

H. G. Wells

Various methods are buzzed from ear to ear, and delicate issues of time and attitude are discussed. None of them seem to have the slightest practical value.

The sex of our children is at present a matter of chance: half of the millions of spermatozoa which are injected at any sexual act are male producers, and half are female producers, and the sex of the child depends on which kind happens to meet the egg first.

It has been suggested that the diet of the pregnant mother can affect the sex of her child, a copious diet for a girl and a lean diet for a boy, and even today educated people are trying to realize their wishes in this way.

There may be something in this idea, as our later discussions of intersexes will show, but there is probably not enough for any perceptible result, and if any were produced it would be much more likely to be an abnormality than for the diet to carry things off in the face of the gene-determination.

There seems to be a confusion here with the effect of external conditions on the sex-ratio that was discussed in the last section. But it should be obvious that there is really no parallel between the action of external conditions on the relative mortality of the sexes and the action of diet on a single embryo.

At present, it must be admitted, we have no practical choice between girls and boys: we have to take what comes, with the odds about fifty-fifty. But this may not always be true. Some day we shall probably work out a real method of control. Perhaps it will be along the lines of the following curious suggestions.

The head of a spermatozoon, as we have already noted, consists of little else than condensed and closely packed chromosomes. Accordingly, when the male has but one X, and the Y is absent or small, the two classes of sperms which he produces may be expected to differ in head-size, and female determiners or X-bearers having bigger heads than their X-less and male determining brethren.

This expectation can be tested by measurement, and measurement shows it to be correct. There is a considerable range of variation in the measurement of sperms—their heads are no less variable in size than our own.

In sperms such as those of fowls, all of which possess an X, this variation varies round a single average size. But in species with marked difference in size between X and Y chormosomes, there are two high points; in the bug Curtius, for instance, there are a great many sperms with heads close to 7½u long, an equal number with heads about 29½u long, and only a few with intermediate lengths.

These two high points represent the average head lengths for male determining and female determining sperms respectively.

This measurable size difference between the two kinds of sperms has also been proved to exist in several mammals, including man; in man the average head length for male determining sperms is just over 4u, for female determiners just under 5u.

It is of considerable interest because it opens the door to a possible method of controlling sex.

If male determining and female determining sperms differ in size, there must be some method of separating them, whether by centrifuging, or if their speed varies as it probably does, by making them swim long distances in nicely warmed fluids, or in some other way.

It will be a ticklish business, but sooner or later the right technique may be found. And artificial insemination has long been shown to be practicable.

The Abbe Spallanzani first achieved it with dogs and cats in the Eighteenth century, and now it is used on a commercial scale in horse breeding in Russia and elsewhere.

Abroad With A New Yorker

By O. O. McIntyre

COPENHAGEN.—We flew from the Berlin airport early Sunday for Steetin, changing into a sea plane for a squint at this much-talked-about city. The sea plane pilot, violet-eyed and apple-cheeked, coaxed a wan smile from me in his effort to assure everything was all right, yes, sir.

At intervals he stuck his head out of a booth like a Jack-in-the Box to bestow encouraging grins. He was—a feeble effort to smart crack in all languages including the Scandinavian—a Great Dane. Copenhagen, on the eastern shore of the island of Zealand, has a population of 700,000.

A smaller nearby island forms a harbor which is a great commercial seaport. I associate this capital of Denmark with Dr. Frederick A. Cook. As a telegraph editor, I handled news of his polar pilgrimage which came from there. The world hung on Copenhagen dispatches. Or Kobenhavn as they spell it here.

Through universities, museums and art, the city gained the sobriquet of "Athens of the North." The most complete collection of ancient and modern sculpture in the world is here. It was collected in the life of one man, Dr. Carl Jacobsen, and presented to the city.

It is housed in the imposing Ny Carlsberg Glyptothek—the exhibit of Roman busts alone occupying an entire wing. Historic moats of twelfth century Copenhagen are enticing boulevards now. Streets in the old town are narrow and ancient gabled houses jostle the new. The language is lyrical after Germany.

Great fires have devastated the city often. Copenhagen's chief square is King's New Market, marked by an equestrian statue of Christian V. Another section—north I should say—is the aristocratic area where thoughfares are broad. The magnificent palace of the king is here.

The palace is surrounded by a large park where children love to play and in the playground is a statue of Hans Christian Andersen, friend of all children, and before which I removed my pearl hat in appreciative memory. Copenhagen women are Junoesque with smiles suggesting sunbursts in porcelain.

The city's meeting place is a democratic center called Tivoli Gardens—a mixture of Palm Beach and Coney, with park, theater, concert hall and enormous restaurant. The most luscious strawberries I ever tasted were served here with whipped cream, spiced with kirsch.

* * *

Everybody, from children to graybeards, rides a bicycle. Streets spin with them and they have the right of way. It strikes me—a mere guess—wealth is more evenly divided here than in most countries. This has nothing to do with Denmark but I just remember I left New York owing a lot of money.

There is nothing of hurry and confusion. Life crawls but somehow twinkles. It could give New York lessons in achieving leisure. After filling up on hors d'oeuvres—one cafe offers 46—I reached a lizard-like torpidity en rapport with the local idea of taking things easy. The Scandinavian version of creamed herrings, by the way, is a lulu.

* * *

In a book shop window was a sign in English: "These books are barred in Germany and France." If literature is that hot, no wonder the fires.

One feels the dual influence of Grieg and Ibsen—merry music and stark sadness. Outdoor cafe tables have the most engaging flowered top cloths. Danes tipple heavily of strong drinks but do not show it. And they lift glasses to say "Skol" although I never heard a drinker say "Prosit!" in Germany.

Copenhagen is as light as noonday at 3 a. m. I read an American newspaper going home in a cab at that hour. And on the way a local boulevardier with monocle and hair parted expertly down the back was quite soberly inspecting the prismatic splendor of a church window. I got out to look, too, and his withering glance indicated he never suspected I left Plattsburg, Mo., some twenty years ago.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Mr. Golfer, what sort of an example do you set to the lad who carries your clubs?

Do you present to him anything that he should desire to emulate?

Is association with you beneficial or detrimental to him?

In your position in your city, in its business and social life, does he think you exemplify the part of a man of your standing should play?

Isn't it natural for him to think that if he acts as you do that he is taking a step toward the position you hold?

If your conduct is such that you would be ashamed to have your friends know it, isn't your caddie going to get a wrong impression of what you are supposed to represent?

You have played golf for a number of years and come in contact with a number of boys.

Have any of them gained by the contact?

By your actions and words do you inspire them with a desire to do great things or to do little things well?

What sort of an opinion does your caddy form of you when you lose control of your temper?

About the only time a caddy gets to associate with successful men is on the golf course and he should get helpful and inspiring examples.
